FOREWORD

First of all, congratulations on completing Part I of the Project and welcome to the New Part II!

To review what we are doing on the present action: the earlier Part I has revealed the Substitute Beingness and the presence of the Imprint phenomena, so the Meta-Programmer can begin to see - from a stable viewpoint that is the Being - the Higher Mind (his own considerations, evaluations, intentions, goals and postulates) and can differentiate its contents from the accompanying Reactive Mind (of misownership, lies, and counter-intentions). However, the current environment may restimulate many Imprints and hold in the Substitute Beingness, the Being's prime solution to all the problems of trying to survive pleasurably in a body on this planet, with a reactive mind, amongst many aberrated people and cultural patterns. So recognising the Imprint phenomena does not necessarily mean that one stops using the Substitute Beingness - it is an engrained habit pattern and is held in place by Substitute Doingnesses and Substitute Havingnesses, in playing the Substitute Game, that of running a body in the Physical Universe.

Part II is a thorough handling of all the basic areas of life that can restimulate the Being, who is now accessible, in Present Time. So it deals with a higher level of Primaries that are the roots of 'case' and the lower level Primaries. It aims to de-programme the 'People Pleaser' Substitute Doingness and restore the Being's causation of Havingness. In this way the Substitute Beingness can be dropped for good and free choice regained. On Part III the Postulates holding the Imprint in place are directly taken apart and Own Goals run, revealing the area of Higher Games to be handled later in the Project.

INTRODUCTION TO PART II

This Part could be called the ‘Why the hell are you still putting it there chum?’ Course, but you wouldn’t believe me (that you’re still putting the Imprint there) and neither would I have when I started it. Though maybe you have become quietly suspicious of this fact, because the Imprint reads as Released yet you know it is still there. So instead of the crass evaluation I will tell you a story and you will know then exactly what I am looking at.

Way back in 1922 when the Depression was looming its ugly head, a fellow who had no job and not much money decided the way to handle this was to buy himself a horse and cart and deliver vegetables door to door. After all, people had to eat. As he didn’t have much money to invest in this enterprise he had to settle for a horse that had been retired out of the Circus. He hired a field with a small shed for the horse. He put the horse in the field after his first day of work, for some free exercise away from the cart. And what do you think that damned horse did? Well, he ran and ran in CIRCLES! Circles the size of the sawdust ring in the Circus. From that day until he died, nothing would persuade that pernickety horse to run any other way. That was it. That was safe. That was familiar.

They say you can't teach an old dog or apparently an old horse new tricks, which may or may not be true. But what is true is you are going to have to find out your old tricks and unlearn them if you are going to make a Fully Realised Being. You have been running round in circles for millions of years in obedience to the Imprint phenomena and have come to depend on this for your survival. As a Free Being doesn’t need to physically survive, this, of course, is a nonsense. The fact is it is familiar and safe and you take it for granted and never inspect it, well not often, but unfortunately it is also Human. Human isn’t to do with Free Being. So the act of deprogramming you from Human to Free Being is what Part II is all about.

You may be familiar with the Cycle of Action and its application in Be, Do and Have but this action cycle unfortunately creates a Time Continuum. Havingness is in future time, mostly, and is expressed as Need. Without a Time Continuum you would create in NOW. So that is the first Level we are heading for on this Part.

Someone who is not in their own identity cannot progress very far in Meta-Programming. Having now let go of the mass of identities along with the Imprint phenomena, you can now handle the true Self at last. This doesn’t mean with your attention way back in past lives, wondering what in the past will explain your condition. What you want is what you are doing and not doing and having and not having right now, that makes you continue to create that way.

On Part II you can at last ask ‘Why?’ directly because you know for sure the other Pole IS the Imprint and that’s all you need to know about that. The Present Time Pole IS the resolution to the ‘Why?’.

YOU are the Genie in the bottle and the magic word that will let you out is ‘familiarity’. You have become too used to the limited physical environment, the very limited physical game, using a body which has total limitations and hypnotic perceptions. It is a limited, no responsibility, no liability, safe game and provided you don’t do anything to upset the other inmates you will be permitted to play it forever. If you do upset them and show the slightest amount of real non-conformity, they will of course give you hell!

To the extent that you are in a condition of ‘danger’ and you are ‘the junior on the job that has to be bypassed’, not able to take responsibility and be at cause, you can never become Fully Realised, even though you acquire potential abilities from the viewpoint of Part I being complete. You will only use them to play a better game in the physical universe, which is the equivalent of taking a sledge-hammer to crack an egg. With the rest of the universes and beyond available to run in, you can only run in familiar circles like the circus horse until familiarity as a button is flattened. Just consider the size of the Earth and then the size of the Universe, then the size of the space you actually be, do and have in, keep going till the awfulness of it hits you and you will have total confirmation of what I am saying here.

Each Level of Part II is a thorough handling in itself of one facet of the case and capable of producing Endpoint (EP) type realisations. This does not mean the whole Part is complete or that later Levels should not be run. This would be to deny yourself the whole gain of doing the Part by ‘quickying’ it. You should have your win after a big realisation but you should continue later. The ground work on Part II is to set you up for Part III and should be very thoroughly done. On Part II you are running out the present time hidden restimulators that would deflect you from looking at the Postulates on Part III as they actually are. So poorly run Part II would also deny you gain on Part III as well.

You should continue to do the next Level and use the Level Assessment for previous Levels until no further charge is accessible on any Level. Knowing the reason for one’s situation does not eradicate one’s involvement with it, as this exists on many Levels, and they have many link-ups. All these links have to be erased or one continues the reactive involvement in the material life. The fact that you begin to see the nature of the trap is not the exit from entrapment. One’s personal involvement has to be run out entirely; these are the guy-ropes that exist on both sides of the Imprint phenomena. The Endpoint of Part II is a free (P/N) needle response on the final Level Assessment.

ESCAPING

By no actual consent of our own, at death we are torn from our friends and possessions and crushed into new lives. But just because we understand this, it makes it no less arbitrary or painful, no less a trap. We are in a trap and it is to a wide extent of our own making. Religions have promised escape and accordingly achieved massive following. They offered hope but their spiritual techniques were not sufficient to offer a route out of the trap for the majority of their adherents and misguided application of such techniques, in the search for an escape from duality or conflict, has led to identification with the delusory unity of the material universe rather than the intended higher consciousness. This is because the way out is the way through. It requires increased communication, understanding, empathy, involvement and ability - not withdrawal and propitiation. It requires neither fight or flight; attachments and fears have to be overcome by increased understanding.

There are those who would say (e.g. Jesus, Krishnamurti, Sai Baba, Beatles), that LOVE is the answer to this whole conundrum. And they'd be right, except that is the Endpoint and leaves out confronting and duplicating the charge of every Opposed ID on your case, as well as recognising every misownership and falsehood and spotting every postulate held in Present Time. This is the difficulty with following the strictures of religious ideals - loving your enemy requires the pan-determinism of a fully enlightened Being. They do have a value as ethical guidelines but may also fill the role of 'super-ego' and encourage guilt feelings as well as the inevitable hypocrisy, when the standard cannot be maintained.

Freedom is a state of mind - not freedom from something but a sense of freedom, a freedom to doubt and question everything and therefore so intense, active and vigorous that it throws away every form of dependence, slavery, conformity and restriction of choice. So escape is not the result of belief or faith or morality or any such thing as that. There is an escape and that is by means of the exact application of the techniques of this Project. The Truth must come from within. With this technology we have specific methods to remove the clouds of unknowingness. And then we know our original choices and postulates. By knowing these, many of which are specific to the individual, then reversal of these postulates and decisions is a matter of one thing only: choice.

When you reject something false, when you throw off a burden, you have more energy, more drive, and the underlying fear no longer exists - no fear of making a mistake, no fear of doing right or wrong, no fear of authority. That energy itself produces the radical inward revolution. So you are left with your Self; no longer looking to anybody or anything for help, you are free to discover. A mind that has no fear is capable of great love. And when there is love you can do what you will.

'WHO OR WHAT...' QUESTIONS

It is well known that negative questions like 'Who could you go out of communication with?' or at-effect questions like 'What would you choose to receive?' cannot be applied without disastrous results. Justifications are of no benefit except to clean the way for exposing the prior misdeeds. Even traumatic incidents only release on the Postulate (the Being's cause) being discovered.

Unfortunately, the Game to which we are accustomed is based on fighting, denial of CUE (communication, understanding and empathy), Games Conditions (pre-requisite aspects of games) and the enjoyment of being effect. If you do not run these aspects of Game and unstick their flows, you are never going to remedy the person's Game and thereby reinstate full freedom.

The best previous approach to handle the conditions of Game was to run misdeeds in various forms. Unfortunately, this approach does not rise above shame, blame and regret and therefore has limited effectiveness. The conditions of Game that are considered legitimate to the Being, do not even get touched by that approach, let alone run.

Conditions of game can only be run from a positive emotional viewpoint, but until the Being can be got into this area stably, you cannot ask the necessary questions without caving him in or making him feel guilty for his actions. This limits his reach and willingness to cause, except along the prescribed and limited lines of the Game on this planet, where only good and socially limited causation is acceptable. This is not the route to Full Realisation and the Remedy of All Games.

The continuous suppression of causation results in the destructiveness common in our society today, as the aberrated Being seeks to express the full range of his ability to cause. The human being is bound only by his allegiance to society and not necessarily by a personal understanding of the ethics necessary to live within this Game. When that allegiance is blown he has no personal resources to fall back on and all hell reigns. Human society can only survive by a strict maintenance of this suppression, guarding itself assiduously against crazy (non-conforming) Free Beings.

The route out is a very narrow one: a restoration of his communication, understanding & empathy, which equals duplication of the Game. This can only be done by addressing the Being's causation at the level of action, without caving him in with the accumulated shame, blame and regret for the past and with the Present Time cultural suppression of action; which means the negative questions and the effect questions have to be asked in a non-restimulative form, so the Being can inspect them and duplicate their charge.

By asking him 'W/W would (some negative act)?' you are putting the Being in a pan-determined viewpoint where he can inspect and adjudicate who or what would be capable of, able to do, or has done the action, without having the finger pointed immediately at himself.

When one is being something one cannot inspect that viewpoint because there is no space across which to view. Real objectivity is outward and not introspective. By the time he has listed enough Items that would do the dastardly act, he has created enough space that he is much more himself and can move away from the beingness he has been that actually did the act, and can now list them as viewpoints of no greater magnitude and significance than any others on his list. He has, in fact, now added the needed Item to the list. The list is complete and can be assessed and the VI (Verified Item) indicated. The pan-determined viewpoint has given him enough space across which to view. Whereas directly asking him for the misdeed/VI would, without the opportunity to discharge, not produce the VI because there would be no space across which to view that Item. So as you can see, negative questions cannot normally be asked. On a W/W Question they can be asked because you are working on a fly-by basis rather than directly asking the question. For example:

‘W/W is (negative action) to a (item assessed)?’

Here the ambiguity between which of the 4 flows (self to other; other to self; other to other; self to self) is being asked for makes it possible to surface the facts as the Being is never in the hot seat unless he is the subject of the question. Then he is there only long enough to give the actual Item. This is confrontable as it is now a duplicatable truth and it releases as he separates out from that identity. Until that occurs he lists on all 4 flows that occur, where, due to the ‘whirlpool’ phenomena the reactive mental mechanism provides the items on an A=B=C stimulus-response basis.

END-POINTS

As I am often asked about EPs, and as it is an area that is not entirely understood, I thought a few words were necessary.

EP, meaning End-Point, is a specific term implying that a phenomena will occur at the end of a Handling, Level or Part. It creates a definite expectation of the phenomenon and its location in time.

This is complicated by the fact that two forms of EP occur in this Project. For example, there are the expected EPs of Part I, which could be called Access EPs. This is an EP that is necessary to the procedure itself as it confirms the student's certainty he has completed Part I and therefore gives access to Part II. He knows who he is being, the Substitute Beingness.

Access EPs are not the same as Personal EPs even if you go over the moon about them. Personal EPs can occur anywhere in any of the Parts and do not necessarily indicate the end of the Handling or Level.

Part I is very easy to overrun because it could be continued with some results almost indefinitely. But for our purposes this is not necessary as it would be a very much slower and probably inconclusive route. All we want is to set the student up to be able to run Part II which means he must have achieved the Access EP for that handling. This does not imply, however, that the EP should occur precisely at the end of Part I of the Project or that no further Part I will need to be run. The Access EP can occur anywhere during Part I and there can be much residual charge to handle, with Personal EPs, before the student feels complete on that Part. And Part I techniques may be returned to for further application at any later point at which they are appropriate.

Time is fundamentally a lie, and it is becoming apparent the concept of time is not native to a Being. The concepts therefore of 'before', 'after', 'later than', 'earlier than', 'past' and 'future' are all physical universe terms and only relevant to a time continuum and a reactive mental state. The reactive contents of mind are continually recreated in Present Time, the mechanism has no time in it, and the Being's problems with it are in PT, which is why we only run NOW. So to introduce these terms into the procedure by limiting the EP to a time, 'at the end of' the action, is a misconception. This misconception becomes even more apparent on Part II with its 15 Levels.

On Part II one weaves about from Level to Level as more charge becomes available. So in practice, one runs a Level, and can achieve what appears to be an EP with no further charge left on that Level, and goes on to the next Level. Later, after other Levels have been run, more charge is uncovered and the Level that EP'd becomes 'live' again - there is now more to run. These Levels have a cyclic nature: after further Levels an earlier Level is seen from a different, raised viewpoint, so new material becomes available to run. One can come back to a Level many times and achieve Personal EPs, or they just go flat for the time being. On later Parts, these Levels can be returned to (using the Level Assessment) and further restimulations handled, resulting in more and more stability of gains. So, the moral of the story is, don't limit yourself to one major EP at the end of the Part you are on. Have wins, as occurring, all the way. Little wins, big wins, no matter - they all accumulate towards the final EP of the Part.

Maybe you will have a Grande Finale at the end of some Parts, or it may be just no more charge available on that type of handling and it will fizzle out. The completion of each Part is necessary to the whole Project - The Remedy of All Games. It is only set up in Parts for technical and administrative reasons, so just run it as it goes. Cases stack up differently so you will only invalidate your wins if you limit yourself to expectations of final EPs, that affect the case like Hidden Standards (your own expectations of abilities to be gained without which you consider the techniques are not working).

Is it not better to have many wins on the way through that actually change your life, than a major EP (Nirvana, Enlightenment, etc.) that doesn't live up to what is promised? Such an EP acts as an unrealistic Standard, invalidating the continuous, small but significant wins that are required, to achieve major progress on a gradient scale of gradually increased awareness, responsibility and confront. Run the Insight Project on its own terms and your own understanding of Truth gained from honestly worked Indicator Tech, and the actual results may be far in advance of other-determined goals because they will be based on your own reality.

FANTASY

This is a central question: Why do Beings compulsively visualise and fantasise? Of course the recognition that a person is a Stable Case is that he realises knowingly that he is putting these creations there every moment of the time, and can choose to do so or not do so. The real explanation behind this is a question of Havingness - when a Being considers he cannot entirely abandon something. There is a revolutionary streak, some form of resistance which exists covertly even when it is not overtly manifest, to assert his position in space. It's in part a refusal to acknowledge leaving a space, and one method by which a Being may be weakened and reduced in power is to force him to move from his chosen position in space.

So when a Being is forced to relinquish space at a point of effect, having had a bad experience, he will recreate that space and provide a picture of that leaving which is to a large extent force and this is the traumatic incident. He may use this negative fantasy to hide where he truly is; that is, he negates the place where he does not wish to be but must be - here and now.

When we look at a traumatic incident there are efforts connected with it, to retain a position in that location. This is why the method of traumatic incident running, where we locate the incident and duplicate it in time, space, form and event is so successful, because we facilitate the Being in relocating that space.

Likewise a contact assist (recreating the circumstances of an original painful contact) will work on this approach because the person is brought back to the reality of the original situation, the space that he/she was in, it is duplicated and the condition blows.

If we look at this structure, of how a Being is the architect and author of his own situation, it is evident that since many Imprints are intended to keep a Being out of an area, he compulsively recreates that location out of resentment and by so doing restimulates the Imprint on himself.

Perhaps earlier in spiritual history a recreated space was a bit like a warning sign saying 'Don't look, don't go there'. We dropped too far in consciousness for this to be useful even in that minor way. So we end up at this level with anxiety which results from not being able to be somewhere, and not being where one is, either. As they say in everyday language: this person 'is not all there'!

In the course of everyday life, making a person leave or transferring them, is highly restimulative. We can see this in the workplace, people really jump up and down when they are made redundant .

If we look at 'How to Handle a Stuck Picture' in the Part I materials, we see exactly what a person is trying to do when he/she is stuck in a traumatic incident, making an attempt to stop something in it, withdraw from something in it, and holding on to it, making an effort to regain the situation at the beginning of that incident. The larger part of a traumatic incident is refusal and there is negation both of place and of time.

As previously stated, power of choice is the signal factor, and the methods we are using here, are to rehabilitate the Being's power of choice. So one can release traumatic incidents by asking some questions to reveal the stuck locations, and then you can pinpoint where and when it was (i.e. Date/Locate), without having to go into the full details of what the traumatic incident contains in the conventional 're-living' manner. The questions would be:

What location is unsafe?

What location could you have held absolutely?

Where did you first get an intimation of danger?

What place would you rather not be in?

What effort would it take to hold that location?

Then Date/Locate

This is not a lower level handling. However, used in conjunction with Indicator Tech, when appropriate during this and other Parts, these methods of finding and discharging a traumatic incident containing pain are superior to all methods hitherto, as they restore personal power - the ability to occupy a location in space, at will.

THE BEING IN A BODY

In common with the major spiritual systems that have evolved, there is a consensus of agreement that there are several parts which make up man - there is the Spirit (the Being or Higher Self), the Mind and the Body. The Mind may be sub-divided into higher and lower parts: the Higher Self views from the spiritual dimension and postulates from it (we can call this the Higher Mind); and the Higher Self manifests in this world as the conscious Composite Self and acts through it (we can call the record and computation of this, which is carried out in conjunction with the brain, the Lower Mind). Both types of mind can be divided into that which is conscious and aware - the Cognitive - and that which is an automatically created, stimulus-response, unconscious way of functioning, that is Reactive.

The non-material Self operates in conjunction with the material body. This includes the brain as an interpreting computer for the Spiritual Being's communications with this world (non-verbal to verbal, intention to motor impulses, etc.). The primitive survival mechanism of the animal species, with all its drives, instincts, and genetic memories, derived from earlier lives and stages of physical evolution, is held in the cells and DNA of the body. These also have a controlling (and communicable) non-material 'intelligence' based in the 'subtle' energy field enfusing the cells, called the Body-mind. For example, sexual attraction to the opposite gender is a genetically transferred instinct, held in this Body-mind. What qualities of woman or man is a choice of the composite of all the aspects of mind discussed.

The Reactive mental mechanisms that are directly associated with the current-life body and its trauma, similarly have an analogue in the body as a cellular record and as tensions and energy blockages, which result from the mental ridges of conflicting intentions.

The combination of the Cognitive and Reactive processes of thought, when they are identified by long association with the body, and the Body-mind, makes up the Composite Self, the 'ego' that many people think is their entire beingness.

The Spirit, we could say, is what we are truly being, something that has intrinsically neither mass nor wavelength nor location in space or time. Therefore we cannot easily perceive the spirits of others, only through their actions or their manifestation through mind, and this leads people to feel or become 'only ones', a particular type of dramatisation.

This leads us on to 'exteriorisation': the phenomena of being in that position in space which depends only on one's consideration or choice, and accompanied sometimes by the ability to view from that point and perceive what is there.

Some people are compulsively exterior, they can't confront dealing with the body except from a distance, and there are others that can't get out of their head; others encompass their body and a much wider space with their presence, or are conscious of their true state of being in the spiritual dimension of no space and time. The distance over which a Being may reach and withdraw from the body is related to abundance or scarcity of bodies, and the ability of vision depends on the abundance and scarcity of things available to experience. Our willingness to experience (for example, to perceive) is monitored totally by the number of things that it is considered there are available to experience, so if there are not enough we go and find some, and therein lies the reason for compulsively recreating Reactive mental contents.

So there are two situations concerning abundance and scarcity. We find that in a society like the Wild West, where there was a scarcity, a person has one attitude towards life and death - there's too few people so he kills those that exist; and then where you have too high a population, a person can look at this from quite a cynical and cold viewpoint, where people don't matter and neglect of starving millions is perhaps regarded as an acceptable thing to do. A Being prefers an optimum quantity, an optimum randomness.

A mind works with a combination of association and differentiation. For example, when we form a concept we use association, and find that things that are of the same class, like tables, are integrated within that concept through sharing similar qualities, such as four-leggedness. However the concept may be expanded because there are differentiating factors - tables are made out of various types of wood.

This works reasonably well until a person is overwhelmed by too few or too many things to experience and then he tends to identify compulsively - the Reactive way of thinking, which is  $A=B=C$ . Drama on TV, for example, is a system of ready made restimulation that whirls around the various mental contents of scarcity and abundance and gives us some rather solid pictures to look at. This reduces our problem of wanting things to experience, but also tends to solidify the reactive mechanism.

The body is a solid appendage, which makes a person recognisable to other body-bound beings. Bodies are a very old and popular game and they have two systems of control, like an aeroplane has the pilot and the auto-pilot. In this case the pilot is the Being that controls the body, although there are arguments along these lines with the habitual, set patterns of behaviour installed in the functioning of the Body-mind, which form an automatic substratum. Mostly, we work on auto-pilot. To make much change on a body, both of these things must be looked at: the Body-mind and the Spiritual Being.

So we have three aspects to being in this universe, and these influence one another and interact. The Spirit, the Mind and the Body. Indeed we have a Mind that splits into several parts, so we have several flows of Being to Minds, Minds to Body, Body to Being, plus all of the reverse flows of this. By opening up the communication lines between all of these things a person may re-acquaint himself, and it is only by an approach on all of these dimensions that the techniques of self-improvement will radically enhance a person's life.

PART II INSTRUCTIONS

Here are your instructions for Part II. READ ONLY AS FAR AS LEVEL 1. Optimally the material would be handed out Level by Level but to do that is impractical. So you are on trust to do this for yourself. No peeking as it would cause confusion, with more than the one aspect of case in restimulation.

Then proceed until it is obvious you are ready to begin the next Level - you will feel that the subject of the Level is no longer any problem to you. Part II is quite a long action and in addition you should be able to complete Open Lines from Conflict Structures derived from your Part I OLA as this material is unburdened and the remaining Items become available. So keep the Part I OLA to hand as you may need to refer to it and add to it when necessary for Goals and Identity Items that may come into view. Other than that the OLA is unnecessary because the tops and tails of Probcons (the main technical device on Part II) are intentions and counter-intentions of problems and not often Items of Goals as such - but still be on the lookout for running into a Goal Conflict Structure.

Get as much as you can out of every Level before starting work on the next one. You will notice each Level is separated by a page showing the Level Number so that you do not contact details of the next Level until you are ready .

As in Part I the main charge weaves about, so you will do more work later on many of the Levels as more material becomes uncovered. Instructions are in the Level Assessment section for handling this phenomena.

Some Levels will need a lot of work and others only a little, depending on your particular case. The charged areas are different for each person. You should feel quite certain when to move on and probably have a good idea of what comes next as it unravels. Nevertheless check each Level for remaining charge before moving on.

PROBCONS

The Questions for the various Levels are handled with the Parcel technique, as on Part I. In its use on Part I, the intention was to find a charged Item and shut off the charge by opposing for 3 or 4 Items ending on an Opposed ID. However the Items found on Part II are not, strictly speaking, Items out of GOALs, though the occasional one is. Nor in fact are they the same as Identity Parcels as their pattern is irregular in formation, i.e. they may not end on the OppID.

- In the first place you are listing from a Question (sourced from the subject of an Assessment and about the assessed Button) for the first Verified Item (specific answer to the Listing Question, Verified and Indicated) = VI;
- You clean the VI with Repeater and Indicator Tech;
- Then you have to check the ‘Item oppose?’/‘oppose Item?’ questions to find which way to list from your Item:
  - "W/W would (Item) oppose?" [Item = VI]
  - "W/W would oppose (Item)?" [Item = Opposed VI]
- Then there can be anything from 2 to 7 Items which often end up on a VI instead of the OppVI. In point of fact you have no option here as you will run into an unbudgeable P/N on the last Question and can go no further anyway.
- And finally you run the first Item on Repeater again, to P/N.

Their construction does not seem to be necessarily of the ID/OppID quality - opposing identities, familiar from Part I. Items, concepts, conditions, whole statements, whatever, can come up, but this is okay as long as they assess cleanly.

By way of explanation: as mentioned in Part I, the Universe being a Two Pole arrangement, you have Games at the top, which is Players versus Opponents. Below that you have the Goal IDs versus OppIDs (where the opponent has become an enemy), and below that you have Problems, Intentions versus Counter-Intentions (yours and the Imprint phenomena’s). These irregular Parcels are in the main Problem Constructions, i.e. Probcons.

PROBCON: A Problem Construction. An Parcel type handling of the Items, beingnesses, postulates, intentions, counter-intentions, efforts and counter-efforts contained in any problem. The number of VIs and Opposed VIs are irregular, anything from one to a whole Goal equivalent. Each Item LISTed for is cleaned with Repeater and Indicator Tech to P/N.

A PROBLEM is defined as postulate vs. counter-postulate, identity vs. counter-identity, force vs. counter-force, intention vs. counter-intention. It is one thing versus another thing. One Item (VI) vs. another Item (OppVI). You’ve got two forces or two ideas of comparable magnitude which are interlocked and the thing stops right there. With these two things, one stuck against the other, you get a timelessness, the problem floats in no-time, and is accessed in the present.

SERIES: Two or more Probcons originated from one or more Levels that case-wise are related as a single aspect of case. Until the Series is completed, sometimes via the direction of the Level Assessment, then there may well be high BP, less Balance

Action per session and between-session restimulation. All the aspects of Bypassed Charge can be manifested because the charge is being restimulated but can only be handled sequentially. So the apparent Bypassed Charge is in future time, as not-yet-handled charge, rather than by-passed in earlier sessions.

Tips on running Probcons

Probcons frequently lay up in series of two or more. Sometimes the link between them is clearly recognisable, sometimes not or only vaguely. On the first Probcon of a series, the Balance Point goes up high and the needle is quite tight, P/Ns are small and sticky. As long as there is adequate Balance Action by the end of the Probcon all is well, even if the BP is still high at the end. It indicates another Probcon in series with it, not necessarily from the same Level either. Using the Level Assessment printed at the end of each Level, assess for previous Levels that have been done or for the next Level, find the Item and run it. The last one in the series brings the BP down at last, works below your normal range and ends up at your normal reading.

CUE upsets will again show up on the Probcons and are handled as before. If you start to feel angry or upset in the session, suspect this immediately. If you find yourself out-of-session, having 'goes' at others, or they at you, suspect one is around (or bypassed) and handle.

If a Goal or Item comes up during the running of a Probcon, either as an Item or Indicator Expression, then add it to the Part I OLA with the Item-oppose/oppose-Item, pair of Questions. It is likely to be the next obvious candidate but it should still be assessed out from comparable material to be sure it is the major-reading Item. This is achieved by using the Level Assessment before a session - this will either indicate an Imprint Goal needs to be found and run in Part I style, or the correct Level to work from, or Correction actions required.

If 'Something else' reads, then assess the Something Else? List. If 'Imprint Goal' reads on the Level Assessment or 'Bypassed Goal' reads on the Something Else? List, then assess the Part I OLA. One of the most recent Items on the OLA will probably (but not necessarily) be the one you want. Then run this in session with the full Goals procedure of Part I. All of the procedure of Part I still applies, including the Correction Lists and COEX Handlings

If an Assessment button becomes apparent that is real to you but not included on the lists, add it to the appropriate Assessment List.

Ideally, if you can schedule your sessions to be able to handle a Series, with session breaks between Probcons, it is better for you, you won't go overnight wishing you had done that extra session. On the other hand, if necessary take another session to achieve this, then don't continue beyond that win. Done that way you will have the least difficulty. You may well then realise something between sessions and dream up more relevant questions for your lists. Done right it goes on wheels.

It is amazing: you can find yourself in session with a BP at 5.5 and an almost stuck needle, feeling ridiculously high-toned and in good shape without any of the usual somatics of that high-BP situation. This is basic unhandled Interiorisation charge you are confronting. The only difference now is that you can confront it and handle it. Whereas before it was sheer overwhelm and unrunnable. All that could be done was to obtain a release to bring the BP down. Erasure does it now and you are at last up to that on equal terms. These are your last links to the Imprint phenomena that have kept you going round and round in the groove even though it had apparently been released.

The Items themselves do little for the quantity of Balance Action but tend more to separate out the poles in the situation and make the underlying material available. So if you really work your Indicator Tech hard on these Probcons there are realisations to be had by the bushel.

The Probcon is rather like handling the charge of problems just as you fillet fish. You open up the problem and take out the bones of it (the intentions and counter-intentions). It's as simple as that. Then you will really see some Balance Action and wins, as the Reactive mechanism of mind is a seething mass of counter-intentions. Here is where you sort them out.

Unlike Parcels, the Open Lines of Probcons need not be put on the OLA as they are not true Goal Items. Nevertheless, continue the OLA from Part I. Continue to add Dead Horses from Goals run; Dead Horses from Goal clean-ups; both questions for any Goals recognised; and (when it emerges) the People Pleaser as a Goal if it does not run as such immediately.

Realisations and Indicator Tech Expressions may be recognised as Items or Goals and added to the OLA; also Items on a Probcon that you suspect may be Goal Items.

The rest of the Items on a Probcon can release and drop away on the Indicator Tech of the first Item, particularly if it was one that layered for several pages. This can leave you with a one Item Probcon that will not oppose but instead P/N. This is okay and for some people may be common. Write it in the centre of the Conflict Structure page as it is not defined as VI or OppVI.

Misownership can drive the BP up through the roof. If you run into this and Indicator Tech or the next Item doesn't bring the BP down to at least a normal high, find out what the Item is connected with. First check 'What is the misowned Item?', or 'What is being misowned?'. Then if it reads, 'W/W would misown (Item)?' and Parcel it to P/N, Part I style as it would be an Identity.

Use 'would' or 'could' in Questions added to Lists if you have to, but 'is' is always preferable with '-ing' added to second verbs where possible, unless otherwise instructed. You pull the charge off more directly on what the Being is doing in PT by using the present time version of 'to be' - 'is'.

Metabolism can appear 'out' when it is tested before the BP is in proper register, with the needle still rising. The needle settling can take much longer on this Part as you are working in the area of ridges (conflicting energy flows causing a stuck mass) and the needle has to rise a long way (the resistance of these ridges) before it settles at a higher BP than previously.

If an Item Rockslams do not oppose it. If the Item-oppose/oppose-Item question cannot be got to read with Suppress buttons, treat it as a Dead Horse question and put it on the OLA marked 'RS'. Clear the Item of bypassed charge only. If a suppressed Identity turns up on this, handle by repeater and Indicator Tech only.

You will eventually get to such a certainty about yourself you will know what should read most times and it will. But don't get cocky about it, always check. You may well be right but if it is in the middle of a Probcon series, for instance, and there's a couple of things to come off first, your guesstimate will get you in trouble. So always check, however sure, and don't be skimpy about it either, it pays.

Conflict Structures for Probcons should be headed with the Level and dated. The Listing Question from the Level should be written across the top left-hand corner. On Levels where there are multiple handlings try to keep them all on the same set of pages used for Conflict Structures, ruled off between each action.

On your Worksheet, the last Probcon item that P/N'd when opposed - write the P/N in red at the centre of the page below the last line and rule it off.

How many Probcons there are to each Level will depend on what charge you have already erased on your work in Part I and II, so prediction on this is not possible. Don't be in a hurry with the earlier Levels in this part of the Project. They are very loaded. The later Levels tend to have fewer, but even then a loaded one can come up. Some Levels you may discharge on 1 or 2 Probcons. Earlier Levels could be 30 or more. Some Levels you will come back to later in the Part when they read on Level Assessments.

Just work through steadily and thoroughly, without anxiety to get through quickly. It resolves when all the charge is release and it cannot be hurried.

If a Goal or Postulate turns up in the middle of a Probcon as an Item, treat it as just another Item and continue to the next question. For the Goal, do not try both Questions here, only the next Question you would ask for a Probcon Item. Put the Goal or Postulate on the Part I OLA. It may come up for running (as the major reading Item) when that Probcon series is complete. A Postulate, a Goal or a Goal Item can be worded exactly the same as a Probcon Item but you can only tell which by the way they subsequently handle. Goal Items are identities (viewpoints with a purpose) whereas Probcon items can be anything that comes up - concepts, opinions, postulates, evaluations, intentions, conditions, etc., as well as identities.

ASSESSMENTS

The Assessment lists can be extended. If you recognise something relevant or Buttons (assessment items) come up in the Probcons that indicate for you, do as I have done, and feel free to add to the lists. There is no liability. If you are right the Button will read now or later. If you are wrong, dynamite won't shift the needle. Assess added Buttons first on your next assessment, as they may well be the major reading.

As your confront increases you will observe your own actions more and more objectively. The responses of others and your own realisations point these up. If you put them on the Assessments as Buttons they will prove out, if charged, and lead to more usable material. So cultivate the art of self observation. What you are doing right now is more often than not the exact charge you are looking for. The pressures of the Imprint programme and your own counter-effort is always in Present Time and can be observed.

Don't read the Assessment Lists before you come to run them, only the articles and notes about them. (Note: some Assessments have notes at the end which should be read before assessing the list). The reason that you don't read the Assessments until they come into view is as follows. Basically one is seeking the same charge throughout, this doesn't vary. The variable is the Being's viewpoint, this is in a constant state of change. Each assessment is structured to this change of viewpoint in order to tap the charge. If you were to read an Assessment ahead of time it would be viewed from the current viewpoint and would not therefore be valid. I did not write up the Assessments until my viewpoint had changed and I don't think I could have as I would not have known where to look. When you are ready to run it, your attention has transferred onto the new area. To look, before that happens, is to introduce an unnecessary complication which cannot serve any reasonable purpose. So keep to your own backyard until it is cleared of that viewpoint.

Do NOT look up the Buttons in any Assessments in a dictionary. You need to run the concept the question reads on, not something else. If you notice a word you really do not know the meaning of when assessing and it does not read, on a separate occasion that is not assessing, look it up in a dictionary.

When do you change to the next Assessment Level? When its name reads on the final line of the List you are on. When you realise you are operating from a different viewpoint. When you EP the Level with a big win on it. When the next Level indicates for you. The pre-session or end-of-session Level Assessment indicates 'Next Level' as the major read. Or if you missed all of these, you will notice that the running of the last 2 or 3 Probcons is somewhat tacky. Overrun doesn't read nor any part of the Something Else? List. Something is not quite right. The questions are not quite reaching for the material you know is there and you find you are wrestling with the area. So check 'Next Level?' and see if it reads. This situation is not, strictly speaking, an overrun situation, as later you will return to these earlier levels as more charge is uncovered. It is just time to move on now.

The order of the Assessments could also be somewhat arbitrary. This is the order in which it unravelled for me. Here the Level Assessment will be invaluable if you are in any doubt as to where to go for the next level of charge.

Use the Level Assessment at the start of each session except if you have an incomplete Probcon (use 'Next Item? Something Else?').

Later on Part II, you will find yourself changing from one Level to another back and forth like a Jack-in-the-box. This is because, for a while yet, Present Time will still be attempting to kick your teeth in and the restimulated charge is where it is and in no regular pattern. Also many Probcons seem to run in series of 2 or more and the series need not at all be from the same Level. One Level is needed to uncover the charge on a different Level so just follow through as the Level Assessment indicates until it unbuckles.

How to handle the Assessments.

Call the Buttons (or Questions, depending on the List) with good intention, but not too rapidly. If the needle doesn't read instantly, call the next item, except if you can actually feel the charge, in which case put in Suppressed, Invalidated and Unacknowledged. The Button, to be clean of charge, should either P/N or be a definite clean needle. Do not clean the Suppress buttons if they read, call the Button again. A clean needle should really look as though it is minding its own business; the whole area you are working in may be very suppressed.

If you get a strongly reading Button that is probably it. If you continue assessing, the needle can go dirty on all subsequent Buttons and finally stick. End off; indicate the Item and end off the Assessment as usual. For a small read, continue assessing till you get a really good one and only buy the small read if nothing else reads. When you've handled the Item and come back to the Assessment, continue from the point you previously reached. When all the list has been covered, start again at the beginning as Buttons may now read that did not before.

Use a card to cover Buttons below as you assess the list, so that the eye does not dart ahead and confuse the read.

Be very suspicious of any reads on Assessment that are latent, or any hesitation of the needle, as this may indicate a suppressed item. Frequently Assessments may be called against a rising needle; if so put the needle well over to the right of the dial before calling the assessment Button. Note the speed of the rise, and if it is slower or faster than is usual for you be suspicious of that Button. In this case go back and call it again and check it with Suppressed, Invalidated and Unacknowledged so that you are sure it is uncharged before proceeding. Some of the material is very hidden and will only come to light when you do this. The suspicious Buttons will either clear to a very smooth rise or P/N or produce a very good read when inspected so you will be in no doubt on the matter.

I believe much material releases automatically when these Buttons are inspected in this manner and require no further handling. The handling seems to be that your attention was put on that aspect of case. Also it is not unusual on Part II to see a Fall and then an P/N or just a one-cycle P/N. It actually feels as though the last of the charge on that subject releases on the calling of the question but always check again when you see this phenomena.

Part of the way through Part II, P/Ns may become very slightly latent. This P/N is usually preceded by a dirty needle meaning 'No', or some very minor read or change of characteristic, as the last of the charge releases on that Button by inspection. It is a good idea in view of this to pick up the Assessment at the point where you last took a reading Button. This makes sure every Item gets called several times. This gets off the suppression and releases by inspection can then occur more often.

An Assessment that does not produce a reading Button should be reassessed and every Item that does not P/N should be checked with Suppressed, Invalidated and Unacknowledged until it reads or P/N's. When the whole List P/Ns then it is clear and that List is completed for that time. Sometimes if it is a late session or one of several for the day this action should be done on the following day when you are fresher.

The Suppress buttons are never cleaned if they read on an Assessment. The read should transfer back on to the Assessment Button.

Adding to an Assessment should always be done as a separate action off the meter. If it is done 'in session' it may become a Listing action and could lead to all the 'incomplete list' and other phenomena. So don't do it. They are separate and different actions.

When you get to the point when these long assessments P/N all the way it is a lot of Havingness to see how much charge you have got off or don't even have. You get to feel quite bomb-proof and why not?

All Listed Items should be Verified before going further (as on Part I). The area is loaded with wrong explanations - Misowned Items on Verification - both ones from the Imprint phenomena and ones you have assigned. Here the intention and counter-intention between you and the Imprint phenomena really starts to come apart. A very good but not totally reliable indication that you are handling a Misowned Item, is that when you get the Item off the list, the read is very tight and small and it doesn't open up on the question 'Suppressed Item?'. This is a good time to get very suspicious. Misowned Items are very insidious and subtle and if you are not very alert to this you will continue to buy them as real.

Items that P/N on Indication are not necessarily uncharged. You have to understand, if an Item P/Ns, this means one of two things:

1. It has erased.
2. It has released.

On this Project you don't want releases as they will restimulate again like they were on elastic. The Item that P/Ns on Indication should still be put on Repeater to P/N, with Indicator Tech. You want all the charge off, not some of it. Opposing the Item completes that action - not the first P/N on Indication, ever. The Imprint phenomena has to be erased to handle it terminatedly. Less than that leaves you vulnerable to it restimulating again on your next exteriorisation (death) or perhaps interiorisation (birth) and that is not the name of the game here.

If MEX or REX doesn't read but you can see something, run Indicator Tech on what you are looking at as a Expression. You didn't get a read because calling the generality, MEX or REX, brought the specific into view and the charge transferred out.

It is an interesting fact that you can predict the whole sequence of a Probcon but it still has to be run if it reads. Which again proves out that the significances are only a vehicle for discharging the energy and force of the reactive mechanisms with Repeater and Indicator Tech.

You may also be very suspicious of all Misdeeds. False ones abound (Indicator Tech will expose these), as do Items that are Misowned Items and the occasional realisation is also false. Accept nothing unchecked and use Indicator Tech very thoroughly.

By way of explanation in allegorical terms, in Part I you have felled a forest of trees; in Part II you are clearing the ground of the stricken trees, undergrowth and debris in preparation to haul out the roots on Part III. So have fun!

FURTHER NOTES ON RUNNING PART II

Please keep us informed of your progress on Part II as this information is valuable for the enhancement of the Insight Project. Some of the Assessments may seem long but I have made them of very broad scope in order to cover the wide variety of cases.

On Part II you are basically discharging the present time restimulators which are one of the main causes of compulsively creating the reactive mental mechanisms. One is unaware of most of this restimulation until it is brought to one's attention because the restimulation is constant. Just as the body experiences 14 lbs of air pressure per square inch and one is unaware of this until there is an increase or decrease, this basic restimulation is unnoticed on the same basis.

On Part II you will be assessing for Items in areas of charge still remaining and holding in the Imprint phenomena. This applies once you've cleared the area of Need (the first Level) and the few remaining Goals to which these are attached, as they become available to run (having been noted when occurring as Items or realisations and added to your Part I OLA).

When the instruction is to Defense Check the Button, use Indicator Tech on every answer and, at the end of the Defense Check (see Pt I), run the Button on Repeater until it P/Ns.

CUE Upsets

CUE Upsets can show up both on Assessment Buttons and Questions as well as Indicator Tech Expressions. To run the CUE Upset, handle C - U - E. When the question is then asked 'Is it a break in (Communication - Understanding - Empathy)?', the answer will produce a Expression which is Indicator Tech'd and then on the Indication this is included with the rest of the material.

Then the Upset is handled Curious about - Desired - Enforced - Inhibited - A Lack of - Protested - Refused - False. Then the same Indicator Tech procedure is handled on the resulting Expression, before Indication. Indicate back to the Button the action is based on.

If you need to go further, ask for a Similar Connected Upset and if necessary, Similar Connected in the Imprint. The original Button is then Repeated to P/N.

It looks complicated but all you have to remember is, don't Indicate anything that has not been checked by Indicator Tech first, and you will be alright.

LEVEL ASSESSMENT

With the Level Assessment as a hand-rail on one side and your Something Else List on the other, you should be able to find your way safely through. You will find the first Level Assessment at the end of Level 1. For convenience, further Levels each have their Level Assessment after the main Assessment List.

The result of the Level Assessment can sometimes produce realisations on the one hand and on the other hand can sometimes be quite overwhelming and would act as an evaluation if the session was started immediately. In that case, take a break. The break acts as a buffer state whereby one can find ones own anchor points in the matter and commence the session from a more stable viewpoint.

Don't prolong sessions beyond an hour. Breaks are important and the havingness of them can produce realisations and new material to add to the Level Assessments.

The appropriate action is to assess the Level Assessment, with buttons if necessary, up to one Level beyond the last Level worked, as printed at the end of each Level. If at any time the Level Assessment does not read, put in buttons on it: Suppressed, Invalidated or Unacknowledged. If it is late in the day or you do not intend to go back into session, assess it when you are fresher next day, as a pre-session Interview.

The question 'Next Level?' is on the Level Assessment because the next Level may not read by its name alone if the material of that Level has not been broached previously. This is because the mind could not be restimulated by the Button as the nature of the Assessment is at that point unknown.

When 'Something Else?' reads on the Level Assessment check the Something Else List (as used on Part I and reprinted on page 28) as your first action, even with buttons if necessary. When you get the 'something else', handle it appropriately and if it's a Goal put it on the OLA to assess which one to run.

If you have done this and not found anything, check 'Something Else on (each Level listed)?'

If that doesn't produce, try it on the Items of the last Probcon, one of them might be a Goal, in which case run it.

If none of that produces, make up an Assessment of what you consider has come into view, particularly if a Goal has appeared in the last couple of Probcons. It could be the Goal-oppose or oppose-Goal or a postulate that you have touched on and bypassed. You might get lucky and get sight of an Own Goal but it may not be runnable yet. Put it on the OLA with the remains of this assessment.

When 'Exteriorisation' reads on the Something Else List but not on the Level Assessment (as a Level), check: 'Exteriorisation as Postulate? Exteriorisation as Goal? Exteriorisation as Safe Solution? Exteriorisation as Item?'

When you have run through most of the Levels the charge will begin to dodge around from one Level to another to pick up the last of the charge that has been uncovered. They unflatten one another as you do other Levels.

The later Levels occasionally bring into view postulates that are relevant to a previous Level. The Question 'Bypassed Postulates?' on the Level Assessment pulls this into view. If this line reads on the Level Assessment, check it against each Level, (also if it reads on the Something Else List). LIST and Probcon to P/N when you find it. For example 'Bypassed Postulate on Need?' reads, LIST 'What is the bypassed Postulate on Need?'

'Bypassed Postulates?' is not a Level in itself, only a repair check.

The answer on Part II is nearly always: Assess for it, LIST and Probcon to P/N.

Unless you have actually goofed, the Something Else List now becomes an Assessment in its own right for miscellanea not covered in the Levels, rather than a Correction List, but it can be used for either.

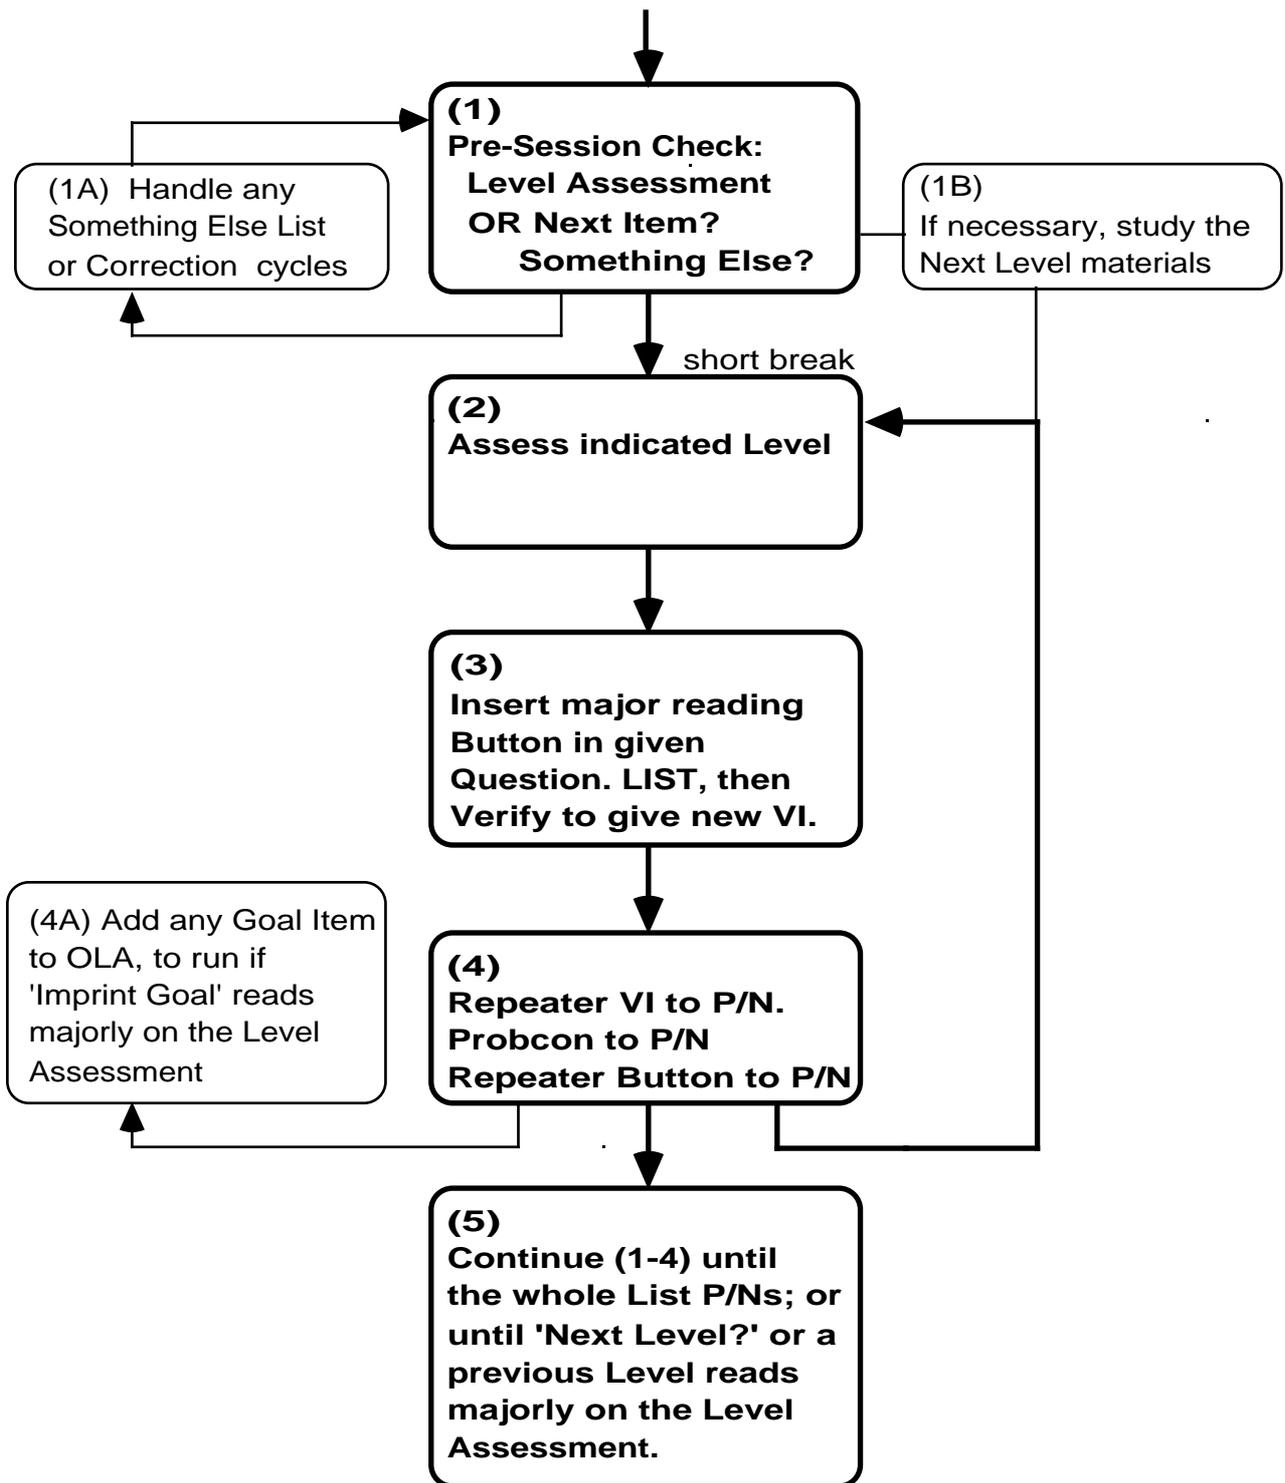

The Repair Lists for Part II are run when the Level Assessment button 'Correction?' reads. When this happens then assess the further list below, that is indented, to isolate the appropriate correction to use.

This Correction Section is itself a Level (Level 0) that may be run whenever it reads majorly on a Level Assessment.

When 'Something Else?' reads, as previously mentioned, it indicates the use of the Something Else List.

YOUR FIRST LEVEL TO START ON IS LEVEL 1 - NEEDS

Handle each read as indicated. If the Item is not apparent, list possibilities to a LF/BD P/N, Indicate and then make the correction as appropriate, using the various techniques described in the Part I materials. Just cleaning with Indicator Tech may be enough, or in addition, cleaning Bypassed Charge on the item. When necessary a Listing Repair may be required, or the Upsets Repair List. Over-run may require a rehabilitation of a release point or the full Life Over-Run Handling on a life over-run (want to stop but can't). Interiorisation and Exteriorisation have their own handlings, and so on. If there is any doubt contact your Case Supervisor for advice.

HIDDEN STANDARDS

The Hidden Standard is a problem that the person considers must be solved before he or she will believe that the situation is resolved. It is itself a problem of long standing, and may have been used to judge the effectiveness of several different past therapies before the person comes to this point.

If you have any reason to suspect this is the situation, such as a particular consideration coming up as an Item or on lists, or your progress on the Project has slowed, or you are resistive about doing sessions, or you are considering certain gains should have occurred by now - these are indicative that the situation should be reviewed, even if 'Hidden Standard?' is not reading on the Level Assessment.

Check the Question: 'What would have to happen for you to know you could operate as a Being?', or if some similar concept has been coming up regarding your case progress, you could try that as well. Bat it around. Create a list of possible questions and assess. 'What purpose has been suppressed?' might also be appropriate.

LIST and put the resulting Item, when cleaned with Repeater & Ind Tech, into the following Questions:

'W/W is suppressing (assessed item) happening?'

'W/W is suggesting (assessed item) should happen?'

Check for the majorly reading Question. LIST and clean the resulting Item with Repeater & Ind Tech, then Probcon to P/N. Or if it's an Identity, Parcel or run the Goal.

If the difficulty persists, then assess the list below and frame further questions. Repeater and Probcon to P/N until all lines are clean.

Stopping
Withdrawing from
Invalidating
Making nothing of
Being careful of
Failing to reveal

Reassess the questions and handle until none of them read with buttons in. It may take several goes to isolate and discharge all the items involved, so persist until you are happy with the scene. Complete flatness is not so much required as you are happy to continue your work without the Hidden Standard blocking your gains.

WITHHOLDS

1. On withhold...

Assess Primary Scale:

1st Domain	Self
2nd Domain	Sex, family
3rd Domain	Groups
4th Domain	Mankind
5th Domain	Life forms
6th Domain	Physical Universe
7th Domain	Spiritual Beings
8th Domain	Spirit, God, Infinity
9th Domain	Ethics (right action)
10th Domain	Aesthetics

2. On (Primary Scale Item)

Assess Secondary Scale:

Help
Control
Communication
Interest
Problems
Change
Pleasing Creating
Responsibility
Confront
Occlusion
Unknowing
Remembering Forgetting
Not knowing
Knowing about
Knowing

Question:

‘W/W would withhold (Sec. Scale Item) from (Primary Scale Item)?’

If this Question does not read, represent the Domain. To do this, for example, LIST: ‘Who or what would represent withholding (Sec. Scale Item) from (Domain)?’, so you get a more specific Item on that Domain. Put it in the second bracket of the Question above. LIST then Probcon to P/N.

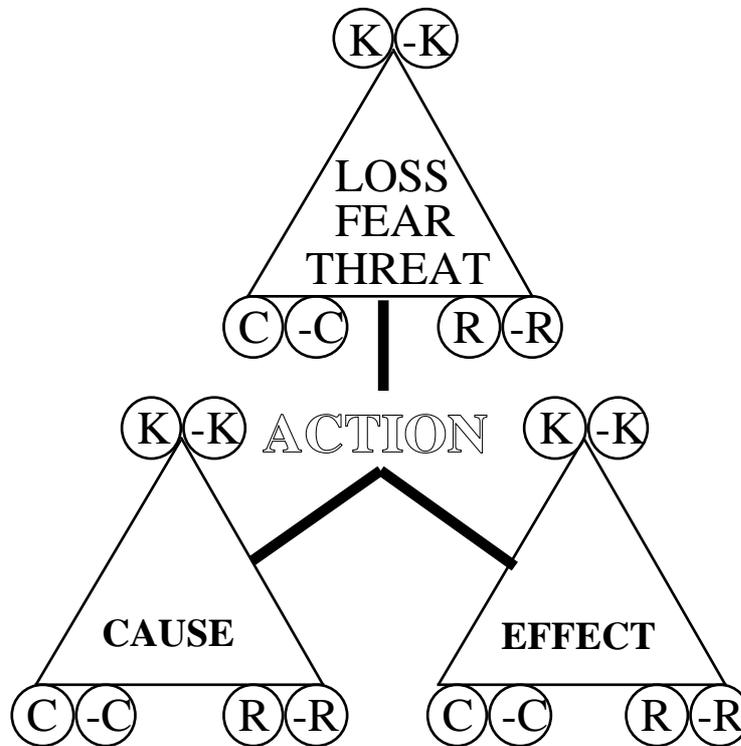

Repeat with the same Primary Scale Item, reassessing the Secondary Scale. If it reads put into the Question and Probcon to P/N. If it doesn’t, then reassess for a new Primary Scale Item. Repeat the above until nothing can be obtained from either Scale with buttons.

PAINFUL CONSEQUENCES

This technique is drawn from the principles underlying Part II; however it may be applied with great benefit through all the Parts when some event is troubling you - e.g. use it at start of session, or as a special session to handle the issue. It may also be used as a COEX Handling.

What's a misdeed? It's an act that counters or opposes the rules of a game. It's a violation of a consideration that one holds about self and/or others. It's an act which the person associates with an effect that's unwanted or unpredicted. Efforts to conceal the act, from oneself or others, may or may not accompany it. Painful emotions of fear, threat or loss may be associated with the cause or with the effect.

The 9 points of the three triangles below represent the person as Knowing, Responsible and in Control, in each of the three areas - Cause, Effect and related Loss, Threat and Fear - of the action that is causing trouble. The 9 points also represent the person as unknowing (-K), irresponsible (-R) and lacking control (-C), in each of the three areas.

In applying this procedure, one typically starts off feeling at the effect of some thought, feeling or emotion. Effect is the starting or entrance point. Cause is not a problem until it causes an unwanted, unintended or unforeseen effect.

The ability to cause increases naturally as awareness, responsibility and confront are increased. However, the invalidation of one's causation, or the regret of causing, often accompany the unwanted effect. In this procedure the person's causation is acknowledged, and in practice validated to a degree, by inspecting the conditions of KRC relating to the causative aspect.

Procedure:

1. Note down the recent action, causation or event that you feel badly about. This may be a 'misdeed', an incompetence, a traumatic incident or simply something you or another did that is causing confusion and uncertainty. Anything that has caused some sort of undesirable effect.
2. This Step looks at the unwanted effect of an action - what happened and the resulting thought, feeling, emotion, pain - for self or others. What affected you about what happened or what you did? What comes back at you? What affected others?

Run the following pairs of questions. If one reads, run the resulting Expression on Indicator Tech. Alternate the questions and when one pair of questions is no longer producing reading Expressions, move on to the next. Continue this part of the handling until the effect is no longer charged.

Regarding (the result of what occurred),

What part of this effect is known to you?

What part of this effect is not known to you?

What part of this effect are you responsible for?

What part of this effect are you not responsible for?

What part of this effect are you in control of?

What part of this effect are you not in control of?

3. This Step looks at the fear, threat or loss connected with what happened. This could relate to the anxiety of getting caught; fear of being found out; the restimulation of past punishments or undiscovered acts; fear of the consequences; threat of unmocking; fear of loss of game; fear of punishment; loss of self-esteem; anxiety of the missed withhold; loss of status, beingness, control; self-invalidation about what you've done. This is the area of the person's response or reactions to what happened. It is usually creations and considerations you are dealing with here, rather than events that have taken place.

First ask:

Connected with what happened, is there a Fear?

Connected with what happened, is there a Threat?

Connected with what happened, is there a Loss?

Insert the major reading aspect (Fear, Threat or Loss) in the following questions and run as in Step 2, using Indicator Tech all the time, continuing until it is no longer charged.

Regarding the (fear, threat or loss),

What part of the (fear, threat or loss) is known to you?

What part of the (fear, threat or loss) is not known to you?

What part of the (fear, threat or loss) are you responsible for?

What part of the (fear, threat or loss) are you not responsible for?

What part of the (fear, threat or loss) are you in control of?

What part of the (fear, threat or loss) are you not in control of?

4. This Step looks at the cause of what occurred, i.e. the viewpoint or the W/W that caused it.

(b) Run the following pairs of questions on the resulting Item. If one reads, run the resulting Expression on Indicator Tech. Alternate the questions and when one pair of questions is no longer producing reading Expressions, move on to the next. Continue this part of the handling until the effect is no longer charged.

Regarding (the causative Item),

What does the cause know?

What does the cause not know?

What is the cause responsible for?

What is the cause not responsible for?

What is the cause in control of?

What is the cause not in control of?

(c) Clean the causative Item on Repeater to P/N. Then Probcon the Item to P/N. Finally clean it again on Repeater to P/N. Apply Indicator Tech to all reading Expressions.

The following Effectiveness Assessment may also be used to help spot breaks in Knowledge, Responsibility and Control relating to activities you are connected with. If one reads, answer the question and run the resulting Expression on Indicator Tech. Apply the above handling if there are painful consequences resulting from ineffectiveness.

EFFECTIVENESS ASSESSMENT

An 'action cycle' is to [Start --> Continue --> Complete] something that needs doing. Similar cycles are:

[Start --> Change --> Stop] [Create --> Persist --> Destroy] [Be --> Do --> Have]

It also aligns with [Knowledge --> Responsibility --> Control].

Assess the questions until one reads, answer the question and run the resulting Expression on Indicator Tech. Apply the previous handling if there are painful consequences resulting from ineffectiveness.

1. Is there an incomplete action cycle?
2. Is there something you have withheld doing?
3. Is there an action cycle being neglected?
4. Is there a start being neglected?
5. Is there a creation being neglected?
6. Is there an identity being neglected?

38. Is there a failure of collaboration or cooperation?
39. Are you trying to leave the post you assigned yourself?
40. Are actions being interrupted?
41. Do you not know what others need and want?
42. Are actions continuing too long?
43. Are you trying to avoid a responsibility?
44. Are actions failing to get off the ground?
45. Is information being invalidated?
46. Is an evaluation interfering with your actions?
47. Are you extending unwanted help or collaboration?
48. Is something being overrun?
49. Is an action unnecessary?
50. Is there some goal, project or target you are hanging on to absolutely?

PAST MISDEEDS

If 'Past Misdeed?' reads on the Level Assessment then you could use the following basic question to clear it:

'Concerning your past, what have you done that you know to be wrong?'

and then use Indicator Tech on the answers, since the more specific an answer is, the better. If necessary use 'Is there more to it?' and 'What are you not looking at?' to get all of it. Don't forget to strip it of MEX and REX at the end of the Indicator Tech sequence. And if still charged, handle as a Misdeed Primary to P/N.

Alternatively, if the nature of the misdeed is not apparent, the following Assessment List may be used to find misdeeds on which there is charge, from a present or 'no-time' viewpoint. You are not going to let yourself out if there is an Identity contained within you that would do these things. This is therefore more relevant than a past 'done'. You may add to the list as appropriate. Any reading misdeed should be LISTED on 'W/W would (misdeed)?' and the Item cleaned with Repeater, then Probcon'd, then run on Repeater again to P/N. All with Indicator Tech of course. (The questions at the end should, if they read, be LISTED to find the misdeed and then handled as above).

PAST LIVES DEBUG

Those who have put a great deal of attention on the past, such as with therapeutic regression to past traumatic experiences, may have been introverted into identities assumed in past lives and incidents of long ago. It is not only that the person has been introverted into this material but also that he is stuck there by lies of one sort or another: REX, MEX, false misdeeds, and various data that are out of sequence with the reality of the experience.

This is further compounded by holding various considerations about the false or misinterpreted beingnesses, lives, incidents and purposes he believes are true, which now act as postulates and opposing postulates in present time, and affect his behaviour and ability to reach. For example, if he is taught to believe he is an evil person by this false material, he will cut his reach so that he doesn't commit further misdeeds.

This can result in a bunch of problems when working on Insight. He may be stuck in his sessions - nothing seems to touch his case. He may have either a very high or very low BP. He can't get reads (by the way, in this situation it is a good idea to check for reads holding the electrodes in the right hand, as this state of unreality is left-brain dominant). He suffers from either very low or exaggeratedly high self-esteem. He can sometimes be ill. He talks about his past beingnesses enthusiastically but doesn't make the case gains he wants.

How does one get the scrambled eggs back in their shells, so one can handle the real case newly in present time, to get the objective results one needs and wants?

Procedure:

1. Isolate a specific experience, case handling or procedure that caused past life material to be restimulated and accepted as an explanation of one's identity or one's present condition.
2. Assess the following list for the largest read:

On (item found) ...

(You can add to this list with further buttons as you feel appropriate)

3. You then take the largest reading button found in the above assessment and put it in the brackets below.

If "False (assessed button)" reads, continue directly to Indicator Tech this read, as if it were the False button in Indicator Tech. Use the item found at Step 1 as Source for your Indication of Truth or Imprinted, check REX and MEX, etc.; then go to Step 7.

Otherwise, continue to assess and note the reads on the rest of the list:

False (assessed button)
Omitted (assessed button)
Altered the sequence of (assessed button)
Used (assessed button) to excuse, justify or explain something
Used (assessed button) as a false scenario for something else
Dropped time out of (assessed button)
Added falsehoods to (assessed button)
Altered the importance of (assessed button)
Used (assessed button) to wrongly target something
Assigned the wrong source for (assessed button)
Made (assessed button) a contrary fact
Added time to (assessed button)
Added inapplicable data to (assessed button)
Incorrectly included other data with (assessed button)
Complicated (assessed button)
Suppressed (assessed button)
Invalidated (assessed button)
Unacknowledged (assessed button)

5. Indicator Tech the major reading line from the above assessment. Use the item found at Step 1 as Source for your Indication of Truth or Imprinted, check REX and MEX, etc.

6. Ask, "On (assessed button from Step 2): are there any considerations?"

Indicator Tech each consideration using the button as Source. Repeat the question until nothing is available or this is a P/N.

7. Put the assessed button from Step 2 on Repeater to P/N. Precede by "False" if that read on Step 3.

8. Re-assess at Step 2.

9. Repeat all the above until nothing reads and the issue is fully clarified.

Level 1

NEED

THE FINAL TRAP

The yogis figured a way to handle it but, on the whole, I figure you would prefer to run it in a matter of months rather than lifetimes.

Every salesman worth his salt knows it for sure. It's his total target before he can sell you a thing.

The whole of the Western culture runs on it and without it I doubt if anyone would do a stroke of work, they would sooner play.

It's the one thing that will keep you as a Spiritual Being asleep for the rest of forever.

And finally, to convince another of it is really the ultimate misdeed.

By now you should have guessed it but in case you haven't it is:

NEED

A Being thoroughly convinced he needs something here will come back into a body and into the physical game. A Free Being doesn't need a thing. You name it and abracadabra he can create it. With this Level flat you would have no need to return to a body on an other-determinism.

Need postulates Becomingness (being in a future time), therefore time and a Time Continuum and a very stuck Game, because Need relates to physical intermediaries acting as a communication point or an orientation point.

Need relates to loss. If you didn't fear the loss of something you couldn't want or need it. Loss relates to exteriorisation and the inability to do so. You need so you hang in there. You fear the loss so you can't exteriorise out of there.

This trap shows up as the second EP of Part I. I doubt it would run earlier but I think in any case it would be too tempting to try and handle it, so I've held it back to Part II Level 1.

RESOLUTION

We have been assured by religious leaders that if we perform certain rituals, repeat certain mantras or prayers, conform to certain patterns, suppress our desires, control our thoughts, sublimate our passions, limit our appetites and refrain from sexual indulgence, we shall, after sufficient torture of the mind and body, find something beyond this little life. And that is what millions of so-called religious people have done throughout the ages.

But a tortured mind, a broken mind, a mind which wants to escape from all turmoil, which has denied the outer world and been made dull through discipline and conformity, will - however long it seeks - find only according to its own delusion.

So to discover whether there is or is not something beyond this anxious, guilty, fearful existence, one must have a different approach altogether. Instead of seeking a future reality promised by another, we must take responsibility ourselves for understanding the present existence. Right now, for no other time has actual existence. Nobody and nothing can answer the question but you yourself, and that is why you must know yourself.

We have been told that all paths - Hindu, Christian, Muslim, etc. - lead to truth, which is plainly absurd. Truth has no path because it is living, moving. This living thing is what you actually are - it has no resting place, is in no temple, mosque or church, and cannot be led to by any philosopher or priest or prophet - truth is within you, it is your life and your responsibility. It is by discovering the lies upon which your life has been founded, the misowned, false, Imprinted and delusory, that the actual underlying truth is revealed - the Being's own considerations, evaluations, decisions, postulates, goals, purposes and creations.

Needs are attachments, interiorisations into the Game. Attachment is a fundamental aspect of case, neglected by Western analysis, but always the cornerstone of Buddhist and other 'enlightenment' practices. It is about desire as the root of all contradiction - wanting something (for pleasure) and then not wanting it (for fear of losing it) - a dual activity. Wanting something with no fear of subsequently losing it is not attachment.

The conflict comes when you compare 'what is' with 'what should be'. Why do we have this psychological duality? We have been conditioned in what is right and wrong, what is good and what is bad, what is moral and immoral. Conditioned by thousands of years of propaganda that you must have an ideal that is the opposite of 'what is', in order to cope with the present. But this discourages the ability to confront and handle the present, to make the most of it and to realistically improve it. It encourages living in the future or past and it encourages hypocrisy and trying to become like somebody else.

Demand is born out of duality: 'I am unhappy and I must be happy'. In that very demand that I must be happy is unhappiness. When you demand an experience of truth or reality, if that demand is born out of inability to experience what is, then the demand creates the opposite. What you resist persists.

Buddha taught that suffering in life is due to a clinging or attachment to phenomena, which being naturally impermanent, cannot give the satisfaction of security. Above all, attachment to one's own identity (ego) is the prime cause of suffering, for this also undergoes change and dies. He suggested a path of 'right' actions to follow, which involved constant watchfulness for its fulfilment (but no case handling!). The essential message is that while personal growth must involve self-definition and a role in life, too great an emphasis on individuation produces a defensive ego-consciousness that becomes closed to change, through fear concerning its own maintenance. This closure is a sign of ignorance which only a profound emotional education can dispel.

The conditioning of the average person dictates a striving towards acquired wants (in addition to basic biological needs) and an anxiety about the achievements and the status of the person himself. In short, greed and illusion are the drives, fuelled by fear and anger, which maintain the fixed attitudes of a conditioned mind. This produces further experiences on one side of the dichotomy or the other, and so the cycle is self-maintaining. Ignorance of the cause of the cycle maintains the compulsive striving or wanting associated with expectations of permanence and security of what is essentially impermanent and changing. Failure to achieve satisfaction leads to disappointment and aversion to the apparent obstacles. The cycle continues beyond death through necessitating rebirth.

The growth of character identity through emotional attachments implies a clinging to the perceived; yet since life is in a flux this involves an inevitable contradiction and disappointment. The 'right actions' of the Buddhist path, that are intended to enlighten the follower to his situation, inevitably require suppression of the opposing existent 'wrongs' and their rationalisations. So whilst the guidance of the path is helpful, it is external and does not resolve the contradictions, and the lies which hold them in place, which are suppressed but active in the mind.

The actions of Level 1 however, do expose and resolve these mental barriers to realisation, and so we have a tool to accomplish, in weeks or months, what many have failed to do in many years of dogged meditation.

Procedure:

1. List your answers (on the meter, noting reads) to the following question:

"What needs do you have?"

(Note: this is not Verified Listing.)

The major reading item is cleaned with Repeater and Indicator Tech.

When the above question is no longer productive, the following Assessment List is assessed until there is a reading Button and then this is inserted into the Question

“W/W would need (.....)?”

The Item resulting from LISTING is Verified and then cleaned with Repeater and Indicator Tech to P/N.

2. The cleaned Item from Step 1 is then opposed (check first for the flow: the major reading of ‘W/W would Item oppose?’ or ‘W/W would oppose Item?’).

4. This oppose question is LISTED and the new VI run on Repeater with Indicator Tech to P/N.

5. Continue to oppose until a Question has no read with Suppress buttons or P/Ns. This completes the Probcon.

6. Finally, if it still reads, the original Need item from Step 1 is again run on Repeater with Indicator Tech to P/N. Then continue at Step 1 to find the next Need item to run.

If there is a Probcon in series with this Probcon, it will tie in with a later majorly reading Button, i.e. you will recognise it. On later Levels, the Level Assessments will enable you to look to another Level for the next Probcon in series).

The Level is complete when the question at Step 1 and assessing the full list just gives a P/N, or when the Next Level reads majorly.

Assess Fear (Next Level)

This list is only given as a suggestion and may be added to freely. Add anything you feel is a Need for you. The best source of inspiration is constantly recurring items you are listing out. Could be run with ‘no’ or ‘not’.

When the list has been gone through and the major reads handled, Buttons may then each be called three times, to be sure the concept has been fully duplicated. Similarly if you know a Button is charged, this may get it to emerge and read, as may the Suppress buttons.

In addition, the Secondary Scale (page 51) may be used on a Button, if you know it is charged or if it continues to read after Probconning and it feels like an aspect of it is being missed. Assess the Secondary Scale as a prefix to the Button:

‘W/W would need (Sec Scale) (Need Button)?’

For example: ‘W/W would need Faith in Significance?’

ANXIETY

We do not typically enter into Meta-Programming in a spirit of disinterested contemplation. Usually we are pushed by something inside of us that hurts, or which demands change, so we are motivated by a powerful sense of self-interest as we try to pick our way through confusion. We are driven by this just as much as by our intelligence and curiosity, and we demand answers that will allay our fears as well as accurately describe reality. But there is a potential for a peculiar conflict in this partnership between our fears and our intellect, particularly because we have trained our intellect to consider only objectively verifiable facts in its deliberations.

The problem is this: the sources of anxiety are ever present and powerfully compelling, while the establishing of certainties which rely on the gathering of incontestable facts tends to be slow and subject to distressing surprises and reversals. The overwhelming need to end my pain and put fears to rest is very capable of forcing logic to take the most nonsensical turns and even to distort perception.

Anxiety is an especially persuasive feeling state which can affect all the operations of the mind in a way that arguments and data never can. It may be ignored or repressed while we force it to wait, but it will still be there creating its distortions.

There is another feeling state which can do away with anxiety, and that is the feeling of certainty. Certainties are warm, dry, shelters in the storm. Anxiety can cloud thoughts and suspend you in a helpless paralysis, while a certainty - no matter how small or grim - lends a basis for decision and action and relaxation of the stress.

This yearning for certainty tends to make us simplify our views of reality; if we can categorise the endless stream of objects and events into a finite number of fixed concepts, then we feel we will have power over them. We describe these objects and events and assign them conceptual forms; these forms then become the bricks and mortar of our reality, the givens upon which future observations and responses are based. And if some bits of data contradict our definitions, or do not fit into our conceptual forms, we try to avoid muddying our present thinking by sweeping them into a large bin filled with all the things that 'will be explained later' or are 'wrong because they conflict with my beliefs'.

We have therefore a strong tendency to bend all our capacities towards establishing and guarding certainties, and once we have tasted it we have a strong compulsion to invest all of our observations, theories and beliefs with this feeling, so that they will become potent against our anxiety, although we may hide this from ourselves and consider the certainties as 'obviously true' or true because various authorities back them up. The 'black and white' thinking of dualities and dichotomies become entrenched, preventing an integrated or 'holistic' perception. And of course, the more collective agreement there is concerning 'certainties', the more emotionally potent they become. The movement from certainty to uncertainty is fear itself.

One of the major causes of fear is that we do not want to face ourselves as we are. Beyond the present moment where there does not appear to be any threat, there is a deeper layer in the mind which is unconsciously thinking of what might happen in the future or worrying that something from the past might reappear. Thought steps in and says, 'Be careful it does not happen again', or 'Be prepared for the future - you've got something now but you may lose it. You may die tomorrow, your wife may run away, you may lose your job, you may never succeed, you may be lonely'.

A mind that is caught in fear lives in confusion and conflict. It suppresses this and dare not move away from its safe solutions and fixed ideas, and this breeds hypocrisy.

Most of us want to have our minds continually occupied all the time so we are prevented from seeing ourselves as we are. On the subject of Fear, we are looking directly into the face of the Imprint phenomena! We are afraid to be empty, afraid to look at our fears, afraid to experience the emotion of fear. This causes the 'mind chatter' that is familiar to anyone who has tried to silence their mind, perhaps in meditation. If you examine a meter needle at very high sensitivity (there is a special 'activity' meter for this purpose), you see continuous fast movements as the mind wanders from one charged item to another. This charge could be considered the gap between the Being and Present Time, between where you are and NOW.

The technique of meditation has been used to address this, to silence the mind so that the intuitive voice of the Higher Self may be heard. One way is to prevent thoughts occurring by a determined effort. This has the effect of suppressing reactivity behind a stone wall. Superficially there are gains but the Being's case is cast in stone and eventually he will pay the price as he comes down with a big bump or falls out the bottom.

The other primary method is 'mindfulness', watching the thoughts go by with a detached objectivity, learning from this where one previously would have identified and entered the stream. But this is a completely random process and what comes up gets no further handling. The procedure of this Project however cultivates this 'open' objectiveness in its techniques of Listing, Repeater and Indicator Tech. Only in the controlled environment of the session with the essential guidance of the meter, can the reactive material be effectively analysed, and the Reactive mechanisms dis-assembled.

Note that Repeater does use the concentration technique of mantra, but with pauses to allow the restimulated material to emerge. Clearing the extensive Lists in Part II is the ideal technique for this reduction of mental 'noise' and this benefit of a 'quieter mind' is analogous to 'opening the window of the soul'.

It should be stressed that the techniques of this Project are not intellectual processes. All the Cognitive Mind does is supervise the case and ask the Questions etc., per the Procedure. The Reactive mechanisms come up with Items and Expressions in stimulus-response fashion. The Being responds to Indicator Tech buttons with its knowingness. For this reason a quiet, receptive mind is appropriate. It is not a matter of 'Why's that?' think-think. As with being a counsellor, the Cognitive Mind needs to be completely neutral, non-judgemental, non-evaluative, giving a safe space and clean slate for the response.

Good Balance Action is often equated with case gain, but it is not quite so simple as that. A Rise reflects relaxation, it is a state of destimulation and withdrawal. The Fall on the other hand reflects tension or brain arousal, resulting from stimulation of the mind, and is a reach. It is a useful exercise to practice this mental reach and withdraw using the meter as a biofeedback device. Life gives 'Balance Action'. You could get Balance Action doing a crossword puzzle, playing darts or painting a picture but that doesn't necessarily resolve the case!

So Balance Action is not the be-all and end-all of case gain. The Being can visualise something, often an evaluation he has taken on-board, and then proceed to take it down again, and get Balance Action. It is possible to do this oneself by bringing the Cognitive Mind into the answering part of the communication cycle, evaluating to the Being what should be there, and the Being mocks it up. You can overrun or become upset or wrongly indicate, then repair it, and get good Balance Action but no case gain! Or you could use a negative procedure on someone with lots of Balance Action but drive them into the ground (eventually there would be a high or very low BP). Balance Action is a valuable indicator that charge is being released on the particular Item addressed, but what Item is the crucial matter, because it determines whether the charge is off the actual case. And that depends on the technique being correct and evaluation being right out of the picture.

The real measure of case gain is things previously hidden being revealed, lies, repression and non-confront released, to get a new realisation of what you are being, doing and having. That is, increased ability, a new attitude transferred to life. So it is improvements in real life that we are looking for, to judge techniques and case gain, not arbitrary Balance Action. Particularly increased CUE, higher emotional level, higher causation and ethics in place. If these sort of results aren't being obtained then the correct action isn't being done or unhandled COEX is blocking progress, however much Balance Action is released on wrong Items.

The inhibiting fear of making mistakes breeds the importance attached to 'being right' all the time. We feel we must escape our pain, quieten our fears, and must act on this immediately. For this reason we are tempted to adopt beliefs and to defend them staunchly as truths. It is entirely possible for rational individuals to be absolutely certain about notions which later prove to be absurd. Indeed it happens all the time and you will probably have come across many instances of this in your own Meta-Programming. The perfect tool for exposing such self deception is Indicator Tech. On this Level we examine the fears, inspired or empowered by the Imprint phenomena, which lay behind the forming of compulsive and misguided certainties, or fixed ideas, which obscure from you the actual truth.

Our sensations and our realities are constantly shifting, and they are not best understood by clinging to any fixed notion, but rather by constant attention to our ongoing processes and by the constant adjustment of our conclusions; seeing reality as it is in the present moment, rather than having to fit in with past conclusions, safe solutions that may not match the actual situation, but which allay hidden fears.

This approach is that of 'being here' in the midst of our experience - bringing all of our sensibilities to bear upon a process in actual motion, gathering together all of our impressions without trying to make hard and fast distinctions between what is 'real' and what is 'subjective' until we begin to get an intuitive sense of how they inter-relate. This is the kind of non-limiting perception that is crucial to the gaining of fresh insights into the subtle and elusive causes and effects, of the spirit, mind and body.

The conditioning of our culture is empowered by fears of repetition of past trauma or of a continuous threat to our existence. The irony being, that the non-material spiritual Being cannot but survive, and can therefore experience anything without liability. If we are unwilling or unable to tolerate certain levels of stress - occasionally even very high levels - we are probably not going to accomplish much in our lives.

Many factors - bodily sensations, reactive associations such as traumatic memories and counter-intentions, expectations, emotions, intellectual analyses - are included in the assessment of stress or danger. When threat is perceived the body exhibits a 'fight or flight' response, pumping adrenaline through the system. Because so many daily circumstances are perceived with anxiety, the body-mind (muscle tension plays a part) may retain an almost permanent state of stress, causing hyper-sensitivity and a restimulated, out-of-present-time state that does not permit the peace of mind required for intuitive reflection as described above. Fear is the main factor keeping the Being at a 'human' level of emotion, mainly concerned with survival. And so long as there is fear there is no love; a mind ridden with fear will never know what love is. In belonging to and depending on another there must always be anxiety, fear, jealousy and guilt.

And lurking behind this is the Imprinted conditioning which programmes us to identify with materiality, to interiorise into a fixed survival game on this planet, and to fear the loss of these attachments. So this Level, Fear, is the reverse flow of the first Level, Need. Need is a compulsive reach, while fear is a compulsive withdraw. Needs keep the fears in place, fears are meaningless without attachments, but it is worthwhile running this flow to complement the first Level and pick up on Items that are not recognised from the viewpoint of Needs.

If traumatic incidents appear on running this Level, they may be handled by use of the questions dealing with holding an unsafe location, run with Indicator Tech. To recap:

What location is unsafe?
 What location could you have held absolutely?
 Where did you first get an intimation of danger?
 What place would you rather not be in?
 What effort would it take to hold that location?
 Then Date/Locate. All with Indicator Tech.

If an incident of overwhelming pain and unconsciousness is restimulated, which causes you to lose control of the session so that it cannot be discharged, or if at any time you feel that case concerning bodily pain or illness is in restimulation and unrunnable by yourself, it will be necessary for you to obtain Traumatic Incident Reduction sessions from a competent counsellor; if there is any difficulty whatsoever, your Case Supervisor must be informed and the matter fully handled, before proceeding with Meta-Programming.

Misdeeds and withholds should be handled with Indicator Tech. Upsets should be fully explored. Safe Solutions (which may be justifications for misdeeds) should be run with the Six Questions and also, 'What does this get you into?' and 'What does this get you out of?' Goals or Identity Items should be added to the OLA and the Level Assessment will tell you when to run them.

Procedure:

- 1 Consider: ‘What fears do you have?’ and assess this list for the major reading fear, clean the Item with Repeater and Indicator Tech and handle further in Step 2. Note, this is not a Verified List, there is no singular item to be found.

When this is no longer productive, use the following main Assessment List. Assess (‘Is there a fear of...’) for the next reading fear, clean the Item with Repeater and Indicator Tech and handle further in Step 2.

- 2 List: ‘What is the need that relates to (assessed fear)?’

This is a Verified Listing action. Handle the resulting need VI as assessed needs on Level 1, i.e insert the need in the further Listing Question:

‘W/W would need (.....)?’

Verify, Indicate and clean the VI, and then Probcon it to P/N.

(Note: the VI may be an Identity, in which case the Probcon will become a Parcel that may lead on to a full Goal Conflict Structure).

- 3 Assess the Defense Checklist overleaf, asking:

‘On (assessed fear) is anything being (Defense)?’

- 4 With each reading button run Repeater to P/N, with the format:

(Run all reading Expressions with Indicator Tech)

EXTERIORISATION

OUT OF YOUR HEAD???

To my mind to bring up the question of exteriorisation in the context of the subject of Full Realisation, is about the same as asking whether a champion Olympic Athlete can bend down and tie his shoe laces! In other words, more than somewhat non-sequitur.

The impression has been given that exteriorisation was relatively easy to accomplish and was far more linked to spiritual abilities than it in fact is. One only had to be out of his head to do this, that and the other. Apart from the fact that one gains the certainty that one is a Spiritual Being and not a body, it is in fact fraught with liabilities.

The conventional view is that death is a trauma and birth is a trauma and these get restimulated by exteriorisation. In the face of that much charge the Being is no longer sessionable and the answer has been the Interiorisation handling, a somewhat fragile solution and usually requiring several goes at it before it will more or less stay in. Certainly the Being isn't going to pop out again so easily thereafter, which I think beggars the question: how can Interiorisation handlings go out again so easily, if the Being isn't popping out again?

I have always been somewhat suspicious of the rationale of this situation. The error, I believe, lies in the fact that in this Western culture, death, due to our soft way of living and our over-eating of junk foods, is usually death from something. In the East birth is usually quick and the mother is back in the fields working straight away. That doesn't sound much of a painful trauma to me!

I agree that there is a cause, but it is neither death nor birth. It is the Imprint phenomena! The Being gets a major restimulation of it when he interiorises back into the body, and that is twice nailed in the head instead of once. This is why Interiorisation handlings are so fragile as they don't even pretend to take on the Imprinted case.

A further difficulty comes from incomplete definitions as to what the deeper levels of case are. The Stable Case is at cause over his mind to a significant extent, yet he knows he is still up to his eyebrows in case. Case can best be defined as anything that is persisting unknowingly. Now if a spiritual Being, one or many, is unknowingly creating a persisting Physical Universe would this not suggest that the case is not just some aggravating mass and stress in the top of your head but actually includes the whole Universe itself? If one can now take this view, then the whole question of 'exteriorisation' takes on a different colour entirely. Does it really matter whether you are out of a head when you are not out of a universe? One is still IN something - Interiorised. If exteriorisation could be considered to mean no longer interiorised into ANYTHING; that is probably the true meaning of the condition. Anything else is merely a step in that direction, a shoe-lace tying job.

A Stable Case, given the above definitions, could be said to be, at least to a substantial extent, exterior from the mind's reactive mechanisms. He is now up to viewing the Physical Universe without having to plough back into new restimulation. There is enough causative energy available to hold his space as a Being in a Universe. He now computes between himself and the world and no longer between himself and the masses in his head. He can now LOOK and handle an actuality most of the time. If he can't his problem is more likely to be a lack of data than his case.

Knowing, creating, imagining, predicting, knowing about, mocking-up, lying, postulating, looking at, seeing, remembering, forgetting, occluding, and negating are all ways of viewing this thing we call the Physical Universe. We put it there, pretend we didn't, and view it from a safe via that won't duplicate, so the game can continue.

When you take that lot down and cease your interiorisation in it then you will be Exterior and Fully Realised. In the meantime there are various way-stops that are a hell of a lot more fun than this 'best of all possible worlds'.

I hope that this has put exteriorisation into its proper perspective once and for all, and, incidentally, probably given a truer view of the mind, and your participation in the persisting universe, and the games Beings play and pretend otherwise. I hope so, because that is what this Project is aiming to sort out terminatedly. If you want to really go exterior, then you want to be Fully Realised. Otherwise, best forget it, as it is yet one more part of the illusion called Physical Universe Game.

I am of the opinion that the whole lower case handling is only drawing charge off the same basic Imprint phenomena. No wonder so many have trouble with Past Lives and Exteriorisation. Obviously no Imprint worth a nickel is going to let you exteriorise. You may decide to keep going and that wouldn't do - or would it?

EXTERIORISATION AS A LEVEL

An awful lot has been said on this subject and many methods have been recommended. But the net result is that stable exteriorisation has not been brought about on all cases addressed. The explanation, I am sure, is given in my article above and until the whole of this Project is complete, it is not an EP that should be anticipated.

The bulk of the ‘Why’ you have tackled on Level 1 and 2, and this Level handles the residual charge on the subject with a thorough Defense Check of each reading Button with Indicator Tech on every answer. I cannot stress too thoroughly the EP is not stably exterior any more than it is on the Interiorisation Handling. It is no more charge on the subject or concern with it. Your attention is no longer hung up on it as a problem.

If a particular Item is very charged and the Defense Check alone does not flatten it, then do a Parcel or Probcon from the Item. This is not recommended for every reading Item because they are open ended and may well come up again and if you have parcelled them all then they are unlikely to and you will miss out on pulling the disinformation off on the attached Expressions which was not available on the first time through.

On this Level you are getting off the lies and false-misdeeds on the subject. You are handling Interiorisation as a charged subject so that it shouldn't kick in again.

The Being's deep concern with Exteriorisation is not really that he wants to know how to be exterior, though he will at first believe this. His real concern is whether he can do it safely without getting clobbered again. Sooner or later he is going to have to do it when he dies. He has been clobbered so often he seeks to avoid a further occasion, hence his concern. This area is flat when the Being is no longer concerned nor does he think being able to, is either a solution to a problem or even relevant.

For these very reasons, it is very easy to overrun. One's anxiety to produce an objective EP causes more Expressions to read but they don't run well. If you suspect an overrun then you will have to restore the release. So be alert to this difference of EP, as it is difficult to spot. This Level can be a long runner as were the previous ones, but as usual this is variable from case to case. I mention it as guidance to avoid under-run which is equally important to avoid. It is a nice judgement, to spot the moment and go on to the next Level smoothly.

On this Level, you could assess the major reading Misdeed-Incident (see next page), from relevant material that has come up.

MISDEEDS AND JUSTIFICATIONS

A misdeed is an action that runs counter to the important intentions of the majority of people affected by the action. A destructive act done by the person against one or more of the 10 Domains (of self, family, group, mankind, animal and plant life, the physical world, spiritual life, the universal, aesthetics and ethics).

A justification, or motivator, results from a misdeed which the person, or one of the above Domains, is considered to be the effect of. The misdeed is then justified and this motivates a new misdeed - the act of revenge.

Someone who has received a misdeed may tend to believe he has done something to deserve it. Someone who has done a misdeed may tend to create reasons for why he did it. People may thus rationalise that they caused something bad when actually they were only involved in something bad, or even just learnt about it happening, without actually having caused it. Or they may believe they only were only involved in something bad, when the truth is they actually caused it. Some people tend to see misdeeds they have done, while others tend only to realise misdeeds they have received.

It is known in counselling that, for example, traumatic incidents that won't resolve by running what was done to the subject, usually resolve by running what he/she did. And vice versa, those that won't resolve by running what the person did' usually resolve by running what was done to him/her. A client can be trying to run out a misdeed he thinks he has done when actually he didn't do the misdeed, and vice versa, he can think he didn't do a misdeed when actually he did.

The same pattern occurs with emotions. A person in grief over loss, who can't resolve this by examining the incident, has in fact caused grief and that can then be run satisfactorily. Similarly with the other emotions (such as fear and anger) where they are frozen or can't be felt.

In Meta-Programming, Indicator Tech is a valuable tool to sort these things out. The principle fact here is that on most cases the misdeed may well be a false misdeed, given by the Imprint phenomena. There are many of these to watch out for. The primary Misdeed-Incident is likely to be on some aspect of Imprinting others.

Use Indicator Tech to isolate False Misdeeds. If this does not completely resolve, then Date/Locate and this will release it as being part of an Imprint, if the D/L is done carefully with Indicator Tech, as explained in the Part I pack. Don't buy any wooden nickels as the essence of an Imprint tends to make you feel guilty of 'something', like a 'missed-withhold of nothing', so that it justifies you being Imprinted. So don't buy it!

THE PEOPLE PLEASER

Not only is the 'People Pleaser' a Goal, but it is also a Substitute Doingness for the Being. It keeps him occupied and in the game. If he won at it, it would spoil the Game.

The most classic example in modern times, whichever side of the argument you are on, is the Union leader Arthur Scargill. He is dramatising his People Pleaser publicly in a compulsive, over-the-top fashion that is quite out of touch with reality. The People Pleaser dramatisation produces dedicated allies and equally determined and dedicated enemies. IDs and OppIDs in abundance. It also produces the Substitute Game, the Physical Universe Game.

You can't win at the People Pleaser because its artificiality is felt by others, and however successful you are being, your efforts are rejected. It sets you up for invalidation with extreme prejudice. Those adherents who can accept your People Pleaser and depend on it, only lend fuel to the flames of your zeal. Others will consider them, in extreme cases, as euphorics and zealots - the artificiality of the People Pleaser demonstrated on a via. It is destructive of CUE and as we all know, this valuable commodity is directly related to increased freedom. To quote a well-known saying: 'You can please some of the people all of the time and all of the people some of the time, but not all of the people all of the time'.

It came up quite naturally, in my case, after four Goals with their attached 'Needs'. So just plough on, you will know it when it comes up. I only include this for your information, so you will know what it is you are handling. I hope it pleases!

This Substitute Doingness Goal will eventually turn up in this or the previous Levels. Just spot and run it, and keep your eyes open for the Substitute Havingness Goal!

Level 4

INTROVERSION

INTROSPECTION

We are looking on this Level to correct those things which cause a person to fixate his attention inwardly on himself. Compulsive introspection is caused by a wrong indication being given, by the person himself, by others around him or by accepted information, which causes him to look inwardly and worry about the mystery caused by this error. In a normal person this causes diminished activity and unhappiness or illness. With a neurotic person it can push him over the edge into insanity or psychosis.

Wrong indications may come about as a result of invalidations, of being made to agree with something under duress, of forms of violence, of being made to feel he has upsets when he hasn't and various indications of people such as inaccurate or generalised criticism, which act as counter-intention and stop his flow.

This may begin early in childhood with the 'overcautious-parent' syndrome - 'What are you doing?', 'Careful, careful, careful!' when you're climbing up a ladder, and such things that interfere with the natural flow of simple actions, so the person arrives at a point in life where he is inhibited from handling the world around him. Such a person has to think about everything he does, rather than just do it.

Harmful intentions that stem from identities that were adopted as a result of having his flows chopped up, earlier in this life or perhaps in others, may cause a person to continuously self-check and inhibit himself. Handle these factors and a free and unimpeded expression becomes possible where previously there had previously been inhibitions, i.e. masses and ridges.

INDIVIDUATION

Beings are separate as individuals, a viewpoint within the Game, and are most effective when they are separate as individuals, but not compulsively so. Compulsive individuation can be the result of a breakdown of communication, understanding and empathy, with blocked flows manifesting as massed energy (ridges). At the extreme this can lead to a split-off second self, or even the perception of a demon which is attacking the body.

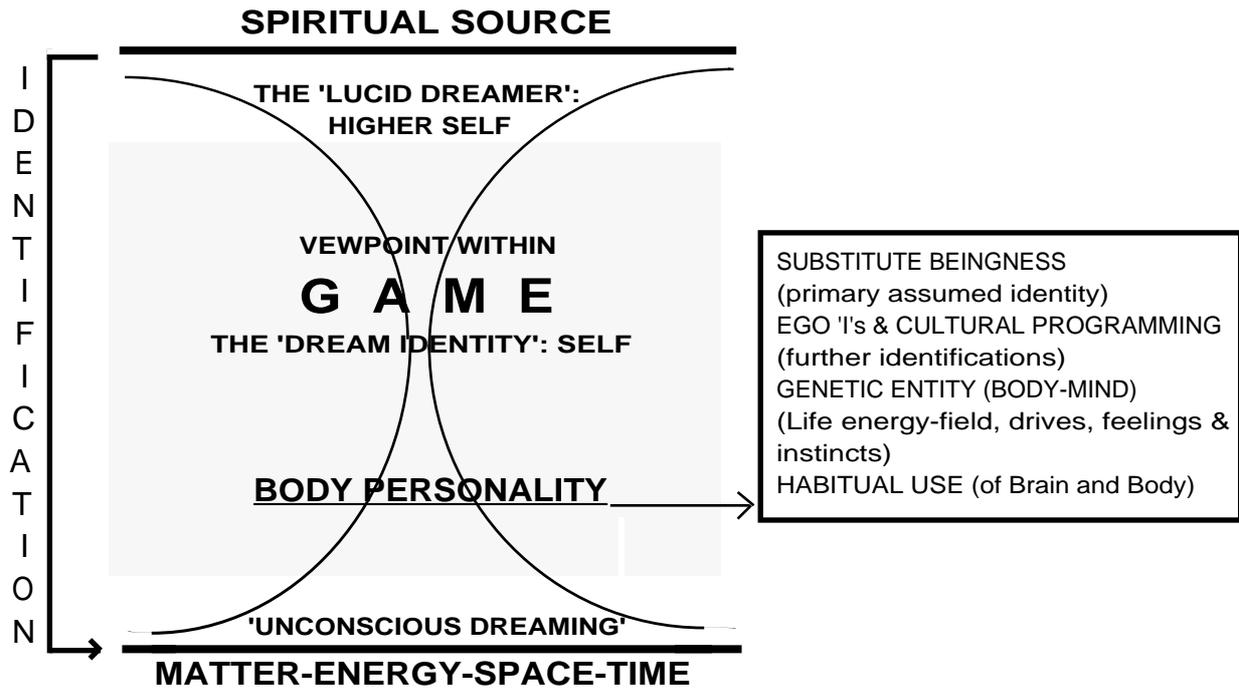

In the absence of CUE there is scarcity rather than an abundance. And as we have seen earlier, the consequence of scarcity is that, as creative Beings, we remedy that scarcity by fantasy.

Individuality is a higher harmonic of individuation, where a Being is expressing his true and unique nature in the light of reason and ethics. The Being has adequate CUE, therefore there is no need for this compulsive fantasy and such conditions do not manifest.

For the purpose of Game, separateness, fighting and opponents are integral parts of the action. But this is a Games Condition (a necessary but usually unknowing and therefore compulsive aspect of a particular Game), rather than an attribute of Spirit itself, which in its pure and uncomplicated expression would lead to a higher type of game based on CUE, in which competition is to creative ends from which all benefit. In such a game we can all be winners, because 'spirit of play' is the ethic, not a competitive struggle which requires the loser to suffer.

The relationship of the Spiritual Being in relation to the Physical Universe is closely analogous with the process of dreaming which occurs in the Being's own created universe. He is the dreamer but whilst dreaming, considers himself to be a new dream-identity, playing the game or story of the dream. If you can imagine a dream from which one never wakes up, that is the rather scary situation we are in on this plane of existence. It is possible to acquire the ability of 'lucid dreaming' in which the dreamer recognises that the dream is in progress and is able to affect the dream - he knows it is a dream and that he is not actually limited to the viewpoint being taken in the dream, and realises that he does have a knowingness outside of it. This is a part awakening, and may begin to occur regarding this universe during the Insight Project (and may also occur in your dreams).

THE PHENOMENA OF DRUGS

Just as he compulsively creates when threatened by a scarcity, the person who perceives an apparent effort to destroy him, fantasises obsessively and unknowingly. Because this is reactive, they will tend to be images from the reactive mental mechanisms plus a combination of imagination and the present situation. He can do this so effectively, that it becomes more real (and safer) than perception of current reality. The person is then actually only partially here, and partially in some past events or altered version of reality.

This is amplified by the use of drugs, whether forbidden substances or the more conventional ones, such as alcohol or tobacco, when these things are indulged in to excess. They are a solution doomed to fail. People who attempt to use drugs as a safe solution are individuated, i.e. in a state of compulsive individualism, as described previously. Drugs produce a threat to the body like any other poison, the Being reacts by mocking-up and there is an altered version of reality.

The memory is not made up wholly of a sequence of current events. It's the created combination of past incidents, imagination and present events, and this delusion is a result of owning the created elements as if they were real. Where a person has not had a drug history this may only be a small part, whereas with a person who has, it may pass the 50% mark. His memory does not contain, in the main part, the same series of events as actually happened.

How then is a person using drugs as an attempt at a solution? A drug may be taken so the person can exit an unbearable situation, such as the loss of a job or a marriage breaking up, and drugs may cause him to leave consciousness altogether. If he gets very accustomed to that he may not entirely return back to Present Time. Even in the absence of drugs you could retreat from a situation into the past or out of consciousness altogether, however there is a tendency to rock back into Present Time when the situation passes, whereas with drugs it isn't necessarily so.

This factor may be contributing to the chronic restimulation because there is this effort versus counter-effort between excessively fantasising and finding as a result you are actually destroying yourself and the reality you share with others. Reduced CUE results, as what is going on for him is not what is going on for other people.

In the face of a dangerous environment, a person tends to go either fully into P.T. or to retreat from it - this is the 'fight or flight' response to a threat. Less sane people may get stuck in that retreat - either they are overwhelmed by it and are stuck in a moment of the past (low BP types), or banged in the middle of nowhere as they retreat from a long gone time (the high BP of dissociation). And every time a person is overwhelmed or banged in the middle of nowhere they fantasise a few more pictures because they need to counter the threat of annihilation, or to turn their particular form of nowhere into a somewhere, and to obscure where they have actually gone.

A better solution than taking drugs is to confront a situation and handle it. It is necessary to integrate the mental process with actual emotions and action of the body, so things actually get done, right now - only then is the person in Present Time. It is necessary to resolve the Mind/Body Split which is caused by the above phenomenon of individuation and compulsive fantasising. By being more grounded in present reality, this also serves to make the person un hypnotisable, less suggestible to outside determinism and helps to awaken him from the cultural trance. The necessary techniques to achieve this begin with this Level.

This Level extraverts the attention onto Present Time, by locating the restimulators in the environment. The area is loaded with Misowned Items, so check every time when you Verify the Item after Listing.

By Probconing the Item, you are taking apart the Imprinted intentions and counter-intentions, entangled with your intentions and counter-intentions, and in the very charged unstable case, these are what cause the violent psychotic breaks that end in murder and mayhem. The Misowned Items are these intentions and counter-intentions. Together they are the basis of insanity. You are not meant to challenge it, only to conform. So check everything thoroughly and misown nothing. The most intense, violent and passionate charge will shut off miraculously and immediately, as soon as you spot the source is Imprinted, and cease to consider it as your own.

The whole area is very suppressed, so when assessing if there is the slightest twinge on the needle, put in Suppressed and Invalidated if necessary, to be sure that is not the Button you want. This list must be P/N'd before you leave it using Suppress buttons on all List Buttons that don't immediately P/N, until you can call the Button and have it P/N.

Sometime near the end of the Introversion questions, with maybe 30-40 Probcons run, you will likely recognise a type of wrong indication that you are using or that is being used on you in Present Time, which points up the major difficulty you have been trying to handle for some while. Put this in the form of a Question (W/W would...?) and Parcel it to shut off the charge.

- E.g.
- W/W would force an upset on someone?
  - W/W would demand non-existent withholds from someone?
  - W/W would make someone feel they have a problem when they don't?
  - W/W would accuse someone of something they didn't do?
  - W/W would reject another's withholds?
  - W/W would ask for things that don't exist?
  - W/W would do someone in?
  - W/W would interrogate another for no reason?
  - W/W would unjustly invalidate another?
  - W/W would validate another for something wrong?
  - W/W would hit another unfairly?
  - W/W would question another's identity?
  - W/W would question another's intentions?

This Level is ready to be run when Exteriorisation no longer seems to be the real problem, as it runs as the opposite flow. The restimulators in Present Time that kick in one's anchor points, so one remains interiorised into the Imprint programme, and one's solutions to it, are opened up to the light of day and erased.

- Assess Havingness? (Next Level)

Having restimulated a past incident, we run it out on the Present Pole by examining P.T. restimulation:

The major reading Question, having been assessed in the past tense, must then be turned into the present tense ‘(verb)ing’ and preceded by ‘W/W is...’. The ‘Were you...’ at the beginning of the assessment questions, or similar, is obviously unnecessary in the present tense version of the question.

For example, the first Questions on the list would be re-phrased:

- ‘W/W is giving you a wrong indication?’
- ‘W/W is telling you your purposes are incorrect?’
- ‘W/W is telling you you have purposes that you don’t actually have?’
- ‘W/W is falsely invalidating some creation of yours?’
- ‘W/W is hitting you for no reason?’ and so on.

This List can be added to appropriately and Questions could also be assessed with ‘no’ or ‘not’, if appropriate.

Procedure:

The assessed question is made into a present tense W/W Question.

LIST, then Verify the Item. Item is run on Repeater to P/N.

Then Probcon the Item (Item oppose/oppose Item) to P/N.

Finally Repeater the Item again to P/N.

Use Indicator Tech on all reading Expressions.

HAVINGNESS

ISOLATION

A person with low havingness is a person who is surrounded by ridges, such that by denying communication, understanding and empathy, the person is hiding behind a shield of very fine mesh that only lets in a limited number of things that are acceptable to him.

So how does acceptance level become so low? A Being has to cut down his knowingness in order to have a game. Space makes it necessary to look at something in order to know it, and by moving and changing things and interchanging energy with other Beings he causes duration and a time span. When he does not have a game he simply cuts down his knowingness once more until eventually this interchange is no longer possible and he assumes a fairly fixed, stupid, viewpoint. He is below the level of having games and is obsessively dramatising the lowering of knowingness.

There is a continuum of reducing knowingness, from knowing down to mystery. At first one simply knows. Then he makes some space and some energy and so has knowingness in terms of looking. By changing the position of the particles of energy thus created, and by exchanging particles with others, he gets time, emotion and sensation. By thinking about these things instead of observing and experiencing them, he adds a further veil to knowingness. When thoughts become solid he is at the level of effort and ridges. After that the ready-made sensations of eating and sex seem the answer, then finally he concludes it is all a mystery that can't be known.

The single arbitrary is Time. This is because Time does not exist as such but stems from havingness: there must be something there to change in space in order to have the illusion of time. Time is summed up as 'had', 'have' and 'will have' (such as a goal to have or achieve something). One engages in action in order to have.

A Being considers it dangerous to have too many wins or too many losses. These make the game not worth playing and so he reduces knowingness, as represented by his dexterity, prediction or activity. One does not decide upwards, into greater knowingness, unless he has an intention to win in a new, higher game. But having played many games and put most of them in the category of 'must not happen again', his enthusiasm tends to wane.

The Being also considers that some form of mass is necessary in order to have a game, to have something 'to play with', but gets into the belief that he cannot create new masses and so begins to hold onto anything he can get hold of - old pictures, old significances, old decisions.

This Level is intended to make these issues apparent, to become more causative about the things that make up the games one is playing.

HAVINGNESS

Having had most of your good ideas about yourself turned inside out and served up as 'dogs-meat', here comes the bonus. On this level you get to find out those things you were right about yourself all the time. And boy, do you get upsets about them! It allows you to take your attention off the past and puts you in better control of your current activities.

This Level is loaded with upsets of all descriptions, colour and violence. In particular there are those incidents where you express yourself causatively and confidently but the result is not acceptable to the recipient. Most Probcons have at least one. Run them as they show up, with Indicator Tech on both the CUE Indication stages, and run 'Similar Connected' if it reads or 'S/C in the Imprint'.

So Havingness is exactly what this Level is. It takes off the charge of the Substitute Havingness that the Being has either been given or has established in the face of the Imprint programme, and sorts out the upsets that reduce Present Time havingness.

Procedure:

- 1 Assess for the major-reading Question.

WAYS OF BEING

IDENTITY

Many people in the world are followers, with no particular drive for freedom, nor any wish to think for themselves. They lack adequate self-esteem to be able to grant acceptance to themselves or to others without imposing conditions. They want to be told what to do, to have someone take responsibility for them and to have the security of belonging to any group that will let them submerge into it. For thousands of years the people in power have been able to 'con' such people into giving their money, labour and even their lives to 'higher values', even though these may be unrelated to each individual's best interests. In short, people have been conned because it suits them to be that way.

A person who doesn't understand his own mind feels threatened that anyone could think differently than he does, and then as part of his philosophy, he doesn't respect the right of others to march to different drummers. He is sure that his religion is the only true belief and feels deep down that his skin is the correct colour and his sex is the better sex. He is sure that only his morality is correct and only his country is worth fighting for.

On the other hand, people who know themselves have a strong sense of personal identity, and confidence in their ability to take charge of their own lives and achieve something of importance; they want the freedom to make their own decisions.

You become who and what you think you are. Choosing goals and working towards them, is what life is all about. What your mind can conceive, you can achieve. Restrictions and boundaries are in the mind. As a graphic example, trained fleas, when they are born, normally learn very rapidly that they have the capacity to hop quite extraordinary distances, equivalent to a human leaping over skyscrapers. When the flea is trained, a transparent cup is placed over it, which it bumps into every time it tries to exercise its native ability. Very soon, the trained flea 'knows' that it is impossible to jump higher than the cup and takes this limitation for granted. It too, has been conned. Similarly humans know their fixed, stifling, standard routine and the degree of initiative that is expected of them.

Where there is freedom, what you get in life depends on what you put out - the effort you make. Some will prefer not to put out much effort. After years of conditioning much of humanity is in that mindset, wanting to stay in a familiar institutional lifestyle where they feel more comfortable, facing problems that they know rather than the challenge of uncertainty and unknown changes.

The pursuit of goals is fulfilling. It's the trip that's important, not the end of the voyage. A person with flexibility of viewpoint will welcome such changes, as new possibilities and unexpected opportunities may be discovered. All spiritual roads lead to that uncomfortable destination where the examination and acceptance of the inner self must take place. The first step is to realise our judgements and fears are self-created and limit our scope to deal with the present. They are the surface manifestations that capture our attention and keep us from focusing on the real blocks, deep in our psyche - the unconscious imprinted patterns.

So well have they been hidden, covered by justifications and illusory beliefs, that few have had the strength to break through them. They are the backbone of duality - the rigid 'black and white' thinking that makes understanding of holistic truth impossible.

One fundamental pattern is identification with a 'victim' identity. At this core are the issues of self-worth. This viewpoint blames external incidents for one's lot in life, failing or refusing to recognise one's own part in the creation of circumstances. This and many other such denials, construct polarities, and ridges of blocked energy form, which attracts like energies towards them. Such patterns become compressed and if not dissipated, the forces contained in them may overwhelm and destabilise the individual.

It becomes a ceaseless force that strikes us every instant of our lives. But we are oblivious to it because we have protective shields - we hold on to the past or hide in the future. We have consuming interests, worries about our status or our possessions. Such shields are both a great help and a great hindrance to us. They pacify us and at the same time fool us, giving us a false sense of security.

Wholeness, or being totally in the present, is dependant on breaking the patterns, of erasing their duality; only then can new states of consciousness become possible.

We have our attention trapped in many such identifications, that have been made but not unmade. Recovering spirituality, the Higher Self, is a process of restoring attention units to our true Being, which then has flexibility and freedom of viewpoint - a recovered awareness, responsibility and confront.

It's been known since ancient times in Eastern religions and philosophies and among some Western mystics, that one's resistance to the events and forces of life lead to one's imprisonment in a smaller viewpoint, an isolation from perception, participation and enjoyment of life.

It's only when a Being considers that he can't safely experience something, that he puts force out to stop it. That wouldn't be so bad, but as time goes by, he forgets what exactly he was trying to avoid and begins to generalise it. Eventually this resistance is occurring on an undifferentiated basis, and his intentions form ridges against much of the life and flows of energy from others around him. He has locked himself into a cocoon of his own making.

The procedures of The Insight Project, layer by layer, strip away the cocoon, leaving the Being in a sense quite naked, ridgeless and free. Part I will have exposed many of the identifications that became enmassed in the self-defeating conflict-structure of the Imprinted Goals. Work on this Level of Part II addresses the more subtle identifications - the fixed attitudes and feelings - and reveals the reasons why a Being restrains himself, releasing the energy and purposes to participate in all of life causatively.

There is a difference between a viewpoint and an identity as we define them. A viewpoint is simply a point from which one perceives. A Being, in order to operate in this universe, needs to assume a viewpoint. He can then receive inflow and create outflow.

An identity contains a viewpoint, but it is more than that. An identity is a way one decides to be in order to deal with a situation or in order to manifest an intention. So it contains a viewpoint, but it's also an intention to achieve something, with accompanying decisions, beliefs, considerations, evaluations and agreements. It's a package of rules and laws passed by the person of how to be in given circumstances.

Everyone has many such identities, necessary to participate in life. The ones that we give attention to on The Insight Project are ones the person gets stuck in - that are imprinted on his or her personality. For example a person may spoil people with kindness, forgiving everything, agreeing with everybody and actually enjoying governing those who cannot govern themselves. A popular community leader, perhaps. But the person may be a total robot - that is, if they can never give orders in a strict way, are never able to criticise others, can never impose order or discriminate right and wrong. This is then a severe limitation and a mechanical (compulsive) identification.

There are as many other fixed identifications as there are personality-types and the different masks people put on for all the varying social situations of their life. And there are very many more subtle ones relating to a person's complex belief-system, the affects of personal trauma, sympathies and misdeeds plus the myriad affects of cultural conditioning (shoulds and shouldn'ts necessary to be accepted) by parents, teachers, bosses, peers, media and society.

All of these identities have an accompanying intention - what the person wanted to achieve by that behaviour. If he has formulated an intention and has not achieved or unmade it, then he is still in the middle of that action cycle and that cycle remains part of his perceived present time, taking up his attention, i.e. his energy and power. He is, to that extent, 'not all here' in present time. This tends to happen with an identification that the person is not conscious of because it is such a familiar part of his life or because it is painful or uncomfortable to view and awareness of it is avoided, so it becomes unconscious. Most people have many frustrated intentions that are 'charged' in this way, and are very adept at justifying and rationalising any manifestations of these 'sub-personalities' so they are not recognised.

PROCEDURE:

First: Specify the identity

Assess for a major reading item (LF/BD).

LIST: ‘What sort of person would be that way?’

Repeater this Identity with Indicator Tech to P/N.

Then check the following two questions for major read:

‘Is this an Identity that you have assumed?’

(If reads majorly - Assumed Identity Handling required - see next)

‘Is this an Identity that you have not assumed?’

(If reads majorly - Another’s Identity Handling required - see later)

Assumed Identity Handling

1. Recall

First: ‘For how long have you been assuming (Identity)?’

Then: ‘For how long do you intend to continue to be (Identity)?’

Then two commands are given on a repetitive basis, to BD P/N:

1. ‘Recall a situation in which you used (Identity) to gain an advantage.’

2. ‘Recall a situation where you were able to gain advantage without using (Identity).’

Clean upsets found, and misdeeds, decisions, etc. with Indicator Tech.

2. Find the intention

Any identity (way of being) is assumed in order to be able to achieve a purpose.

LIST: ‘What would (Identity) intend to accomplish?’

Repeater intention (Defense buttons if necessary) with Indicator Tech.

3. Determine the *Why

Consider: ‘Why would (Identity) want to do that?’

Most fixed intentions, considerations, postulates, beliefs, etc. that have now become contra-survival or irrational, were originally made for what seemed to be a pro-survival purpose. Some of the possible whys follow:

Solving a problem? A conflict? Filling a scarcity? A need?
Getting rid of an excess? To suppress? Cover up?
To falsify? By-pass? Avoid? Make fail? Inhibit? Invalidate?
To destroy? To escape? Enforce? Influence?
Gaining admiration? Gaining recognition? Gaining acknowledgement?
Gaining Communication? Understanding? Empathy? To please?
Resolve confusing thoughts? Efforts? Emotions?
Couldn't grasp something? Based on earlier assumption?
A misunderstood? Uncertainty? Injustice?
A non-confront? Overwhelm? Evaluation? Invalidation?
Failed help? Failed control? Resist change?
Withdraw? Retreat? Give up? Get sympathy?
Misdeed? Withhold? Justification?
Game? Challenge? Revenge? Punishment?
Good idea? Went along with it? Stole it? Noticed it? Accepted it?

When the right why seems to be spotted, it should be checked on the meter:

‘Is there more to this why?’ and reading lines run on Indicator Tech.

If it isn't running right, ask: ‘Do I have a wrong why? Incomplete why?’

Then run safe solution questions:

‘How could (intention) be used to

...make self right ? ...make others wrong?’

...dominate others? ...escape domination?’

...enhance own survival? ...hinder another's survival?’

‘What could (intention) get you into? Get you out of?’

4. Find the Lie

Based on the assumption that there must be an alteration of truth (time, place, form, event or consideration) for a Being's creation to fix and to persist, the next step is to locate the lie. What was untrue that resulted in the why being perceived. Was it based on one of the following outpoints?

Wrong evaluation	Changed sequence of events	Cross orders
Wrong sequence	Copying another	Added arbitrary data
Wrong time	Admiration for source	Assumption
Omitted time	CUE with aberration	Presumption
Always or never	Wrong source of information	Inaccurate
Mis-perception	Self-invalidation	Generalisation
Omitted facts	Withheld power	Wrong consideration
Added falsehood	Wrong target	Altered importance
Contrary facts	Incorrectly included data	Wrong place
Wrong importance	A threat	Wrong form

Note: the basic idea is that if one cannot tolerate a confusion, then one will either get hold of a rational stable datum and move out of the condition, or one will seize upon a false stable datum and sit there indefinitely. It does not resolve the confusion but one holds on to it as a safe solution and ceases to view the overwhelming reality objectively.

5. Dramatisation

Compulsive dramatisation of negative emotion is the primary manifestation of Reactive Mind. Emotion is what connects the Being to the body and its efforts; when it is compulsive, the connection has become a chain and prevents a free and high-CUE relationship between the Being and the body-mind. Role-play with feelings and uninhibited bodily expression:

‘If you were being (Identity) what would you say?’

This can be quite an experience if played for real, and greatly enhances the integration of mental realisations from sessions into everyday behaviour. Dramatisation and any trace of it can then be spotted immediately it surfaces, when due to everyday restimulation the brain/body habit patterns respond in the old automatic ways. Case gain becomes more objective and new programmes can be developed that are free of reactive control.

6. Separate from the Identity

One of the reasons an identity may have been taken up in the first place is if there were misdeeds and withholds connected with the identity, resulting in sympathy and guilt fixations. So you run the following:

Flow 1 - ‘Think of something (Identity) might withhold from you’

- Flow 2 - 'Think of something you might withhold from (Identity)'
- Flow 3 - 'Think of something (Identity) might withhold from others'
- Flow 4 - 'Think of something you might withhold from yourself because of (Identity)'.

Also consider:

'Are you through with that beingness or do you intend to go back to it someday?'

6. Oppose

Check the following Question for read, with Suppress buttons if necessary:

'W/W would (Identity) oppose?'

If reading, LIST to find the new Item (an Opposed Identity), then clean the Item with Repeater and Indicator Tech, then run on the following handling.

Another's Identity Handling

First check:

‘On (Identity) is there
 an upset?
 a problem?
 an invalidation?
 an evaluation?
 a misdeed?
 a withhold?
 a can't have?
 an enforcement?

Run any Reading buttons on 5 flows (only the flows that read) using the following questions with appropriate Primary handling:

Upset	‘Is (Identity) upset with you?’ ‘Are you upset with (Identity)?’ ‘Is (Identity) upset with others?’ ‘Are others upset with (Identity)?’ ‘Are you upset with yourself because of (Identity)?’
Problem	‘Is (Identity) giving you a problem?’ ‘Are you giving (Identity) a problem?’ ‘Is (Identity) giving others a problem?’ ‘Are others giving (Identity) a problem?’ ‘Are you giving yourself a problem because of (Identity)?’
Invalidation	‘Is (Identity) invalidating you?’ ‘Are you invalidating (Identity)?’ ‘Is (Identity) invalidating others?’ ‘Are others invalidating (Identity)?’ ‘Are you invalidating yourself because of (Identity)?’
Evaluation	‘Is (Identity) evaluating for you?’ ‘Are you evaluating for (Identity)?’ ‘Is (Identity) evaluating for others?’ ‘Are others evaluating for (Identity)?’ ‘Are you evaluating yourself because of (Identity)?’
Misdeed	‘What is (Identity) doing to you?’ ‘What are you doing to (Identity)?’ ‘What is (Identity) doing to others?’ ‘What are others doing to (Identity)?’ ‘What are you doing to yourself because of (Identity)?’
Withhold	‘What is (Identity) withholding from you?’ ‘What are you withholding from (Identity)?’ ‘What is (Identity) withholding from others?’ ‘What are others withholding from (Identity)?’ ‘What are you withholding from yourself because of (Identity)?’
Can't have	‘Is (Identity) running a can't have on you?’ ‘Are you running a can't have on (Identity)?’ ‘Is (Identity) running a can't have on others?’

‘Are others running a can’t have on (Identity)?’

‘Are you running a can’t have on yourself because of (Identity)?’

Enforcement ‘Is (Identity) forcing something onto you?’

‘Are you forcing something onto (Identity)?’

‘Is (Identity) forcing something onto others?’

‘Are others forcing something onto (Identity)?’

‘Are you forcing something onto yourself because of (Identity)?’

Then dramatise - ‘If you were talking to (Identity) what would you say?’

Finally, continue to run Identity-oppose/oppose-Identity Questions through to either a Parcel or a full Goal, in Part I style, adding any Dead Horse Items to the Part I OLA.

COMPETENCE

Anyone making a mistake through incompetence naturally builds up charge because of it. He wanted an outcome and fouled it all up and now he is upset. Handling this upset and other attached Primaries takes this charge away, and allows him to view the situation clearly, but does not in itself increase the person's competence. In order to increase his competence, the person would then have to learn whatever is necessary to control things better and be able to take more responsibility towards them. The factors of Knowledge, Responsibility and Control (KRC), then, come into play.

The removal of charge is a negative gain - the person wins by losing a burden. Positive gain would be achieved by learning to live one's life on the higher level of awareness which the removal of charge has made possible. CUE and KRC, which result in understanding and competence, go best hand-in-hand.

Knowledge consists of the complete store of experience a person has to draw from, and the principles and observations he has deduced. At a deeper level it includes Knowingness, the intuitive insight of the Being. Responsibility is expressed in the willingness to predict a result, to cause it to happen and to bear the consequences of success or failure. Control is the ability to start, change and stop things, people or activities; control makes prediction realistic. These three factors are inter-dependent - one can not exist for long without the others. Competence is solely determined by the degree of KRC and can be judged by looking at a person's products - it is deeds not words that count here. By raising each of K, R and C together, the Being discovers his power and command of life.

A Being cannot genuinely be controlled, just as he cannot genuinely be located in space and time. He can, however, determine (e.g. agree or decide) to assume a location in space and time, he can determine to comply with requests and orders given by others, and he can determine to respond in certain ways to changes in his world.

When a person feels, without conscious decision, that he has no choice, that someone or something else is the cause of his actions and therefore responsible for them, then he is being compulsively other-determined (as opposed to agreeing or complying through choice). To the degree that a person is other-determined, he considers himself to be the victim of circumstance. Having assigned responsibility away from himself, he has become dependent - he must wait for the other person to do things, or wait until he is told what to do. A person who has committed harmful acts in an area will tend to deny responsibility and to try to assign responsibility to someone else.

Self-determinism is being responsible for one's own actions. This may involve an element of other-determinism in seeing the other's point of view, or of following his orders, but the decision is conscious and willing. When a person is compulsively self-determined, however, finding himself frequently in opposition to others (games where if one wins, the other loses), if someone else prevails against his intentions or does better than him, he may feel quite invalidated - he would rather be 'one up' and for the other to be dependent on him.

What a person perceives to be the cause of a situation will depend on the identity he has assumed at the time and its relevant intentions and interests; different people will contribute their individual causation to any situation. A person may widen his scope of identity to include a larger portion of the world around him. He is not just concerned about inflow (things happening to him), or reflection (what he is doing to himself); he is also concerned about outflow (things he does affecting others) and cross-flow (things others do to others).

When a person is pan-determined, he takes responsibility for others' well-being in addition to his own; he is willing to take account of what others are working towards, what cause they are trying to effect, and to share responsibility with them towards a greater goal. This state may also become compulsive when altruistic 'people-pleasing' is adopted as a fixed solution, applied indiscriminately.

On this Level, we are looking to find ways of being that are ineffectual - incapable of producing the effect desired - and incompetent, due to a break in knowledge, responsibility or control. The underlying intention is found and the false reasoning upon which it is based. Whenever you have thought confusions (e.g. opinions taken as fact, a similar thing considered the same thing, or an order taken as a suggestion) you have a foul-up of lines. Out of misunderstandings come hostilities; out of these come overwork or the destruction of dreams. Valid solutions may only be obtained by using valid data. As one has to reach conclusions in order to act and has to act correctly to ensure his own or his group's continued survival, it is vital that he be able to observe, analyse and conclude with minimal error.

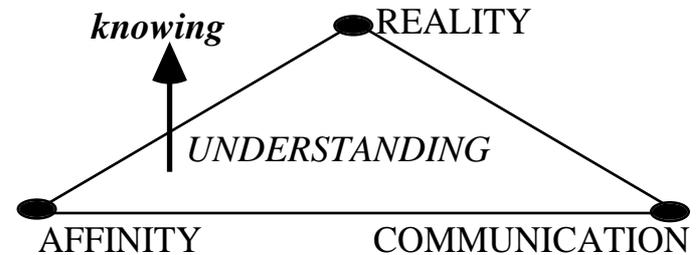

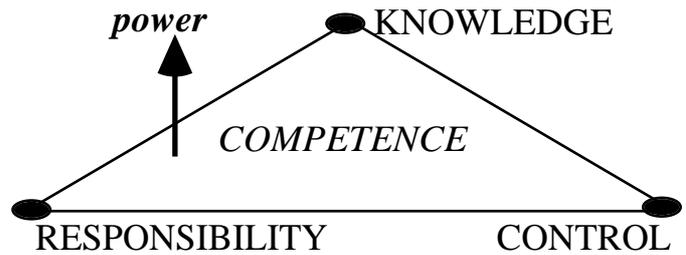

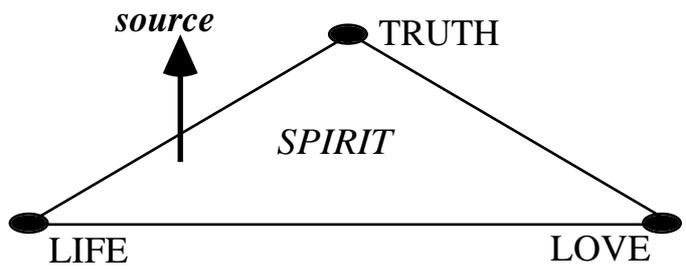

Any incompetence based on an untruth conflicts with prior intentions based on what is considered a truth. This is the charge that reads on the meter: disagreements the Being has with himself, inside his own universe - cracks in his personal integrity. As such, incompetence may be perceived as a misdeed. The person has decided upon very personal principles and is certain of their truth and value. Also, he has adopted the laws and morals of those groups he has chosen to identify with. He will develop charge anytime he transgresses against his own principles or those of his society in a way that he considers unethical. His emotional tone will tend to drop accordingly, as his ethical condition deteriorates (see scale of emotions overleaf).

Below the emotional level of antagonism, blame and 'finding fault' enters as a major factor. Above this level there is sufficient breadth of understanding to see that interdependencies and randomities can exist without fault and blame. At the level of apathy there is no question of either blame or responsibility: the person has become almost material. Materiality is not responsible for anything - it causes no action except when acted upon and owns nothing but is itself owned.

On the other hand, as an individual demonstrates competence towards desired goals, his ethical condition (a measure of KRC) will rise towards power, and his emotional tone (a measure of CUE) will rise accordingly. Able to confront and handle life, and rising in tone, the Being will be awakened and empowered to reflect the higher values of life-enhancement, love and truth, qualities that derive from the source of spirituality.

WEALTH

Information can be defined as coherence - a pattern that is not random. Useful new information is a pattern that you can't otherwise know or that you can't predict easily on the basis of what you do know. The dynamism of evolution is the selection of information - coherence - out of a random series of events, so that a pattern emerges from the unpredictable. Information is a measure of the liveliness of a system - life is an ordering, selecting, coherence-making process.

The evolutionary life-force behaves as if it were always aiming at higher coherence, i.e. higher intelligence. This process accelerates as information builds in an ever-rising learning curve. Human beings are able to accelerate this curve faster through the ability to pass information from generation to generation in the form of symbols (words, maps, equations, etc.) and further information is added at each stage by alive minds contributing creatively.

World-wide wealth in terms of 'real capital' (manufacturing plants and resources, etc.) has been doubling in every generation since economists started collecting statistics in the 18th Century. Where does this wealth come from? According to orthodox economists it comes from land, labour and capital. According to Marxists it comes from land and labour alone, and the capitalist is a thief who has inserted an artificial book-keeping system into the process. Both are limited views. Land and labour alone, and land, labour and capital together, can't produce new wealth if they are organised by a false idea, such as searching for oil where oil does not exist.

The real source of wealth is correct ideas, workable ideas, that is, useful information. The origin of this coherent order is the human life-force, using its mind intelligently. It creates all the ideas which, socially employed, become wealth: roads, engines, scientific laws, printing, computers, life-saving medicines, etc. All that you see, whoever theoretically 'owns' it, is the product of the manifested ideas of creative life-force.

All ideas are not equally good, of course. This is why John Ruskin, a century ago, introduced a distinction between wealth and 'illth'. Wealth, in Ruskin's sense incorporates all those artifacts (concretised ideas) which enhance human life, or life generally. Illth consists of those artifacts which destroy, demean or degrade life. The exponential increase in wealth (life enhancing ideas manifesting) has led to more Utopian yearnings; at the same time, the equal and opposite increase in illth (pollution, weapons, trivial media, etc.) has led to apocalyptical fears. One's expectations about the future are therefore based on what one thinks is the dominant force in evolution, and the responsibility one intends to manifest within this system, both alone and with others.

The conditions of creation imply self-limitation, by manifestation of a creation in space, in time and then in equilibrium. All that exists, exists as a result of the converging action at the same point and at the same time of three forces: Passive, Active and Neutralising. These are the three basic principles of life: the Static (corresponding to the passive force, of being in space), Dynamic (corresponding to the active force, of doing through time) and Neutralising (corresponding to having of manifestation through the balancing of energy flows). These forces work through cycles of action, from recognition of the desired outcome towards its fulfilment.

An example which an ancient esoteric school gave to represent the play of the three forces, is the making of bread. To make bread we need flour, fire and water. In this example, flour is the conductor of the passive force, fire is the active force and water is the neutralising force. If the balance is wrong, this can lead to failure. For example, with the same good flour, the bread can be inedible if we have added too much water or used too high a flame. The passive force contains all the possibilities for creating the phenomenon, the active force intervenes as the realiser, and the neutralising force as the regulator of the relations between the two other forces.

Another classic example is the conception of a child. The woman appears here as the passive force, the husband as the active force and sexual love is the neutralising force; if these three conditions are present, then conception is possible.

In the case of a purchase, the offered merchandise constitutes the passive force, the need or desire of the purchaser intervenes as the active force, and payment as the neutralising force.

Anything that is manifested can be analysed in the light of these three principles. To take the creation of an enterprise as an example, the idea must first be conceived as possible, the project studied and plans drawn up - all of this is based upon the Static principle. Then the creation passes on to realisation, in accordance with the Dynamic principle. In addition the principle of Equilibrium must be maintained between the efforts which the project requires for its manifestation (dynamic), and the plans for that realisation (static) - this will normally require balancing flows, such as interchange of communication and payment for the expertise and labour of hired assistance.

The subject of money is obviously at the heart of all our lives as a balancing medium for the exchange of material wealth (in universally recognised symbolic form) in return for our personal efforts. It particularly exposes us to the brutal realities of survival, of our bodily selves, our families and all that we identify with. It is also closely related to issues of right and wrong actions, good and bad creations, of what is valued and what is disparaged, of caring and neglect, of responsibility and blame.

POWER CHANGE

POWER AND POWER CHANGE

An operative condition of Power is attained when the objectives of an activity are being routinely achieved, and high quality products are being produced or services rendered, and exchanged for income on an ever-increasing statistic. The situation of Power Change occurs when a person who has achieved the condition of power wants to move on, for example, if he has been promoted or wants to move on to a new game; the person who replaces his functions is then in a condition of power change - he is assuming a condition which has been held from power. If this change-over is not carried out correctly, the power-base of the person moving up will deteriorate; very likely he will have to take over his old position again and get things going as they were before.

So the message is: in a position of power, don't disconnect. You can't just deny what you're leaving behind - what you need to do is take responsibility for these connections. You need to write-up the job so another person could take over that position and run the operation as well as you, without blindly changing your successful methods. Otherwise you leave an incomplete cycle of action in your old job, that will continually act to pull you back down in that direction.

In moving into a senior position from a more junior position all incomplete cycles of action which are your responsibility, should be brought to reasonable and ethical conclusions. Otherwise much of your time will be taken up by people reaching into your new universe asking you to take responsibility for things that should no longer be your immediate concern.

When a game ends there must be a new game. If you don't provide a new game somebody else will and it will be over your dead body.

In a position of power you must either let people get on with what they are doing (if that is being done adequately) or lead them to improve their products actively. If you have Power you must either use it or delegate it, or you will lose it. When you are in a team and have people to work for you, you must get them usefully active as quickly as you can or they will become unhappy and you won't have the use of them any more. When you move off a point of Power you must pay all your obligations and wrap up all the outstanding cycles, otherwise the situation will go out of control.

The position near to Power may be dangerous, as others may perceive you to be more vulnerable than the Power you are attached to. So if you are close to some power, get some delegated to you, enough to do your job and protect yourself and your interests. You must gather and use enough power to hold your own.

Lastly and most important, always push power in the direction of anyone on whose power you depend. It could be financial support, it could be defense of his reputation or anything of a similar nature. Real power is developed by tight conspiracy of this kind, pushing somebody up in whose leadership his co-workers have faith. That way a very powerful network can be created. So never feel weaker because you work for somebody in a stronger position. The only real failure is not supporting a strength on which you depend.

This requires active contribution, both from the power and to the power. That is, if you are in a powerful position you must empower those below you and then there is exchange and in return they will empower you. We are looking here at the dynamics of power which are interactive: your retention and expansion of power depends on supporting the people who are supporting you, and on demanding power from them to strengthen your position. And likewise, supporting the power that is above you, to give that more power, on the basis that the power above you delegates power to you, so the whole thing moves forward like a train.

Power is not being a manipulator or a bully. Many people have learned to manipulate by weakness ('I'm going to fall apart if you don't give me what I want'), or through the threat of hostility. People do win sometimes through intimidation but they are not being powerful - they end up lonely, alone, insecure. Powerful persons can direct their energies to create what they want, knowingly and directly, and do not need to rely on intimidation or force. Power requires the ability to act: to consciously create a chosen reality with the least expenditure of energy and with the maximum result. What are the components of power?

- To get in touch with your personal power requires complete honesty - telling the truth to yourself, however uncomfortable. Confide in that person (you). Tell that person the gut level, bottom line, bald, cold truth.
- The second step is accepting the fact that you do have impact - your actions do have an effect and the world out there is not all your imagination.
- The third component of power is responsibility - the ability to respond. The more responsibility you are honestly willing to take, the more potential for power you will have - which will be actualised by action.
- The fourth component is willingness to be powerful - many feel that they have to be deserving but they don't, they just have to be willing.
- The fifth component is to have the courage of commitment and conviction, to have principles that you stand for and the character to act on them.
- The sixth step to be powerful is to give love, and receive love and also to be transformed by the love you receive.
- The seventh component is trust in yourself and in others selectively: trust those who've earned your trust.

It is critical in your spiritual growth to understand that you create your own reality. Once you experiment with manifesting what you want in your reality - the car, the better home, the job, the money and friendships - and you establish a certain expertise, if you retain your integrity then you'll come truly know yourself through power, not weakness. It's one thing to know that you can create what you want physically and then rise above all challenges - that's freedom through success. It's quite another to struggle and struggle and fail repeatedly, and then say, 'I'm going to give it up, I didn't want it anyway' - that's detachment through failure.

This contains all the points that would hold you in existing conditions of Power or Power Change as a being, and prevent you from attaining expanded Power, unprogrammed by the Imprint.

THE GAME OF LIFE

Life is a game consisting of freedom, restrictions, problems, havingness, awareness and interest. Play is communication. A frozen mood of game is reached by assuming that interest can exist on only one emotional level. A no-game condition occurs if a preponderance of win or of lose is reached.

Games consist of purposes which are set to be achieved and certain barriers which are boundaries and limitations of the actions that are allowed within the parameters of the game. Within those barriers there is the freedom of play. Games, in their fullest sense, also include opponents and fighting, and suggest a player who is a conscious and voluntary participant, who's playing for fun or other benefits such as what can be won in a particular game. Games are invented (postulated) including who the players and opponents will be (their identities), the objectives of the game, the playing field, the rules (stated or otherwise), and the duration (determined by time or the achievement of an objective). For the game to be worthwhile there needs to be a possibility of winning and a possibility of losing or failing to achieve the objective.

A game also requires self-determinism: to be a conscious player. If a player becomes so fixated upon a game, so wrapped up in its identities and traumas, that he is no longer conscious of playing a game, then he may be said to have adopted a 'games condition', and to no longer be playing the game self-determinedly: he has become a pawn in his own game. His power of choice has become subjugated into a fixated activity from which he cannot take his attention. Games may in this way become aberrative.

One day I was playing a game of snooker with a friend of mine and about half-way through the game he said 'What's the score?' Do you know, I didn't know and what is more I didn't care. I was enjoying playing and that's all that mattered. So, of course, I won hands down. At that point the penny finally dropped. So my view of the liability of games is: 'All games are fun. Most contests (played primarily to win rather than in the spirit of play) on the other hand are aberrative, though some are fun. And solid games, called problems, are a pain in the neck'.

The human being is very competitive. Competition says the winner is great and everyone else is last and that is an invalidation whether it is a game of skill or chance. Once competition enters a game the 'spirit of play' tends to leave and that spirit is the spirituality of the Being.

The next aberrative quality is persistence, the old time-maker. This is dramatised today in the Test Cricket Series. The prize of the game is the 'Ashes' of somebody's old cricket bat that was ceremoniously burned. It is okay to have a prize in a game otherwise there's no fun but if the prize is taken out of one game into another that is persistence. If one is willing to experience anything then one can experience a win or loss. The inability to do this is the essence of 'games conditions' and there lies the problem. A games condition causes persistence and such games do not un-mock except with true duplication.

The final real aberrative quality is solidity. When a game goes solid - becomes too serious - you get the physical universe, war, and all the other aberrative conditions flesh is heir to.

This Level takes out the restimulators of the past which make you less aware in Present Time. It destimulates the attractions of past games and their reactive persistence. You can end cycle on past failures and losses.

Reading questions on the following assessment are Listed to produce an Item which is then run on Repeater to P/N, then Probcon'd to P/N, all with Indicator Tech.

THE COMEDY OF LIFE

Let us now examine from the practical point of view, how man can attain consciousness of his spiritual nature and of Spirit itself. The diagram below will help to illustrate this:

The black arrows represent influences which occur within the physical game of life, by which man is surrounded. You will notice they are distributed almost equally over the circle of life. A person is subject most of all to the arrows influencing him from his immediate surroundings; he is pulled every instant by the way they act at that moment. The influence of this constant restimulation on a man who is other-determined, not conscious of his spiritual nature, is effectively to be driven, to wander in the circle of his life from birth to death, subject to the law of chance or accident or fate.

In this way man is subjected to the rules of materiality. Yet if we look at the diagram more closely we perceive that each black arrow is counterbalanced, neutralised in some other part by another arrow equal in force or diametrically opposed, so that if we had left them to effectively neutralise one another the resultant force would have been equal to zero. This means that in their ensemble the material forces are illusory in nature, although the effect of each one of them is real, so the physically-orientated man takes them for reality.

The white circle represents the Spirit life-force, located outside the general laws of material life. The white arrows represent the influence of Spirit. They are thrown into the turmoil of life and originate from Spirit as Source. Created in the fifth dimension, outside the four dimensions of space and time, these arrows are all oriented in the same direction. In their ensemble they form a sort of 'magnetic field'. Since material influences neutralise one another, Spiritual influences constitute the true reality.

The small circles represent individuals, with the shaded areas representing their material components and the white areas representing their Spirit component. If man spends his life without distinguishing between material and spiritual influences, he will end life as he started, mechanically driven by the law of accident. Although of course he can make the best of it, he will not have known anything of Truth. But if he discovers the spiritual influences and learns to recognise them in his own nature and contribute to them, he will undergo a certain kind of evolution and a 'magnetic centre' can be formed within him: a development of Spirit Consciousness, a beginning of true self-determinism.

A nurtured Spirit Consciousness in its turn will be able to exercise an influence over the results of the material arrows which are always active, deflecting them. Such a deflection may be violent - it transgresses the material game rules - and may provoke conflict in and around him. If he loses the battle he emerges with the conviction that the Spirit influences are an illusion, that the only the material influences are real, and slowly the magnetic centre which had formed within him disperses. But if he emerges a winner in his first struggle, his magnetic centre strengthens and draws towards him others with still stronger Spirit Consciousness, and this link with Spiritual Source further encourages his development. Henceforth in life, that man will no longer be isolated. To the measure of his growth, he will escape the dominion of the law of accident and enter the domain of consciousness, which has no law over him. If he reaches this result before his death, he can say that his life was not in vain.

It was for this reason that Irene Mumford set up a Network of co-workers, for mutual support in the quest to establish a spiritual body of consciousness, that would be far more powerful than any person alone.

The bi-polar structure of human intelligence, an exact counterpart of the structure of the material world, allows man to study and recognise all the material influences, to orient himself in their immediate and furthest field of action and to apply his abilities to it in order to search, calculate, combine, intervene and act within this sphere. The task of the seeker after Truth is different, but he must guard against falling into the extremes expressed by some teachings; he must neither despise nor neglect his intellectual faculties.

Strengthened by the preceding, someone who is developing in awareness, can and must better understand the comedy of life, in which pretentious blind men lead more modest blind men towards an abyss which will engulf both. Once he knows this, then with the limited independence left to him after the commitments he has undertaken, he will have the possibility of warding off the harmful effects of material influences. The intelligence must be developed and sharpened up to the limit of what is possible, and thought must become sharp as the point of a needle, in order to be able to recognise and master material influences rather than conflict with them head-on. And this must be done in a strictly realistic spirit, free from hypocrisy, self-justification and particularly, free of lying to oneself. Those who make these mistakes think they alone are just, so consequently they are right while others, as well as circumstances, are wrong ('My mind's made up - don't confuse me with the facts!').

The mind at the level of Spirit Consciousness becomes Will, i.e. the fifth dimension is Choice in the no-time of present time. But the reasoning mind, in spite of its complexity and many abilities, is a mechanical instrument and can never know anything of esoteric (spiritual) matters with any certainty. Concerned with phenomena, it is limited by form and function to the three dimensions of space and the fourth dimension, two-pole structure of past and future time.

Awareness, obviously, is a very relevant factor here.

LEVEL ASSESSMENT

This Level releases off the lies and charge that shut down your awareness and screw up reality and agreements for you. There is no reason it could not be Probcon'd if you hit a very charged Item and it seems relevant to you. But I would be inclined to Defense Check it first all the same.

On this Level it is best to Defense Check each reading Button to P/N: 'On (Button) is anything being...?' with very thorough use of Indicator Tech.

POSTULATES

POSTULATES

This Assessment may seem a dauntingly long one but do not despair. It is a very large net to catch a few big fish. It is an area of not only postulates but counter-postulates as well. This Level gives the source of persistence of counter-intentions and wrong effects blocking the achievement of your objectives. The conflict of interests between you and the Imprint phenomena is paramount.

Both your own and Imprinted postulates can be made in many circumstances, so keep your Level Assessment going and follow the charge where it leads. If it indicates earlier Levels, be alert to their postulate and counter-postulate content which tend to come up on Indicator Tech actions. Also, because of the conflict of interest you may find Games Conditions are set up and need to be indicated (or the Item will Repeater for ever and not go to P/N).

As the Probcons lay up in series the reads can be tight, small and faint. Persist with buttons where you feel there is charge or the needle is unclean. When Assessing the Level and an Item reads well and is the Item, subsequent buttons may give a dirty needle or don't P/N on calling, so don't waste time on the rest of the Assessment on that time through.

Indicator Tech is even more important here to sort out the conflict of interests. Occasions for it may occur many times during Repeater to release the charge. Be vigilant to the slightest emotion coming up and leave nothing unhandled by Indicator Tech.

Some postulates will be recognisable as how you view things but do not assume anything is yours. Misownership of a postulate can create large disaster areas in your life and is intended to.

A postulate was never intended by a Being to persist. Persistence creates a time continuum. So all postulates that are persisting both knowingly and unknowingly, yours and Imprinted, are aberrative. Root them out with Indicator Tech assiduously as Time is the primary lie.

Reading buttons on the following assessment are Listed to produce an Item which is then run on Repeater to P/N, then Probcon'd to P/N, all with Indicator Tech.

ANCHOR POINTS,
HOLD ON TO

ANCHOR POINTS, HOLD ON TO

The three Levels: Anchor Points - Hold on to, Let go, and Create, all use the same Assessment. Different buttons tend to come up on each Level but not always.

Time in the field of behaviour and experience becomes 'having'. The desire, enforcement and inhibition in the possession, giving and taking of objects can be found to establish a time continuum. Here we are doing a sideways approach on the basic format of creative visualisation techniques, e.g. 'Visualise something' (corresponds to Create), 'Now throw it away' (Let go), 'Shove it into your body' (Hold on to).

The effect is to run out the unknowing create on present time restimulators. They have always been there to kick in your anchor points (the aspects of your life and environment with which you orient yourself) and keep you restimulated. The three Levels, 13, 14, and 15, bring them into full view and discharge their reactive content.

The main Question for Level 13 is:

'W/W is holding on to (       )?'

Further Questions are given at the end of the Assessment.

Anchor Points.

Here we are working on the dimension points of your life - things that are really real to you - that are charged. While you are holding on to them because they are safe and familiar and therefore uninspected you cannot change your space, move out into the great unknown. A bit more stuckness stemming from association with the Imprint programme which gets you running round and round the same old route of familiarity. Sure it is safe and known but, unfortunately it is a three legged race you can't win with the Imprint phenomena as your partner.

This Level removes the unknown parameters of your existence and frees you up to create known barriers.

If the area is very suppressed you will have to work hard for your reads. Do not call too rapidly. Wait to see what the needle does if it does not immediately P/N or give a totally clean needle, before you go on to the next call. If there is any sign of hesitation, tick or change of characteristic, even if slightly latent, recheck the Item thoroughly. Put in Suppressed buttons where necessary and don't pass anything that could have read without thoroughly checking, including if you thought it should have read.

Reading buttons on the following assessment are Listed to produce an Item which is then run on Repeater to P/N, then Probcon'd to P/N, all with Indicator Tech.

Level 14

ANCHOR POINTS, LET GO

ANCHOR POINTS, LET GO

The main Question for Level 15 is:

‘W/W is letting go of (        )?’

Plus there are other Questions at the end of the Assessment.

Let Go.

To give you an analogy of what you are trying to do here: imagine you are hanging from the branch of a tree 100 feet from the ground. Hanging on grimly and dangling. Now what you are trying to do with the buttons of the Assessment is to talk to yourself into the unusual solution of - letting go! You are caught between the total liability of having a body in this predicament and the total absence of liability of being a free spirit!

As you sort out the cross-flows of charge between these two viewpoints you are gradiently pushing yourself into realisations of your Spiritual nature and running out the stuck programme of the Imprint. The Imprint solutions are always the soft option, play for safety and go on doing what you are doing because you know that's safe. Huh! Says who? This Level enables you to free yourself from unknown factors that limit you to the Physical Game.

If the area is very suppressed you will have to work hard for your reads. Do not call too rapidly. Wait to see what the needle does if it does not immediately P/N or give a totally clean needle, before you go on to the next call. If there is any sign of hesitation, tick or change of characteristic, even if slightly latent, recheck the Item thoroughly. Put in Suppressed buttons where necessary and don't pass anything that could have read without thoroughly checking, including if you thought it should have read.

Reading buttons on the following assessment are Listed to produce an Item which is then run on Repeater to P/N, then Probcon'd to P/N, all with Indicator Tech.

ANCHOR POINTS, CREATE

ANCHOR POINTS, CREATION OF

The Questions on this Level is:

W/W is creating ( )?

Plus there are further Questions at the end of the Assessment.

Create.

It does not matter how far down you push a Being, he will continue to create somehow. Bang him into a body and then into a concentration camp, a prison or something worse and he will create some form of game even at that level. He never gives up. We each of us are a God-being that creates, so how come we end up created in a created universe? Until your awareness of create is at cause-point you stay created at effect-point. This Level sorts out the unknowingness of create. It puts you in control of the unknowing creation of reactive mechanisms which are holding you in the Physical Game.

If the area is very suppressed you will have to work hard for your reads. Do not call too rapidly. Wait to see what the needle does if it does not immediately P/N or give a totally clean needle, before you go on to the next call. ## WHAT'S NEXT

The Levels are run cyclically: you may well need to return to previous Levels (and Parts) when the Level Assessment indicates a new layer of charge has surfaced at that point. The result is a complete handling of the factors that keep the Imprint phenomena restimulated in day to day life, the conflicts of intention which hold the Being in unawareness.

Part II is complete when 'Next Part?' reads on the last Level Assessment and each of the Level Assessments has been completely cleaned, with Suppress buttons if necessary, to give a continuous free needle throughout. To enhance the EP of Part II, do the following action:

By reconsidering your wins in doing Part II of The Insight Project, you can recall and integrate these positive states. Check out the following with Indicator Tech:

Is there some realisation you can't quite put into words?

Is something changing in your way of life?

Has something been shown to be true?

If so, is something being...

classified?
understood?
connected up with?
achieved?
validated?
acknowledged?
pleasurable?

You should now make a full completion report to your Case Supervisor, and apply for the materials of Part III. Have a regular Session Assessment, in case new material has become live and needs to be handled.

After Part II, the potential which was foreseen on Part I can be stably accessed: the Being is able to BE HERE NOW with his Spiritual Primaries (the Part II Levels) in place. As a result of fully completing Part II, the Being's Own Goals and the Postulates that determine them can now be examined in depth, including the guy-ropes (in all domains) that attracted the Being to the Imprint phenomena in the first place and cause him to stay connected with it in the present. Part III resolves this Gordian knot with the great precision that is necessary, to strip off the many layers of second postulates so as to reveal the primary Spiritual Postulates at the very core of the case.
